Exposing the Lies of Our Times

"What has been believed by everyone at all times and in all places has every chance of being wrong." – Paul Valéry, French poet, writer & philosopher

Welcome to New Dawn Special Issue Vol.16 No.6, filled with articles and interviews giving you the 'other side of the story', offering information and analysis ignored or suppressed by the Establishment media and the powers-that-be.

From our first issue in May 1991, the mission of New Dawn magazine has been to seek truth from facts, expose cover-ups and deceptions, and be a forum for empowering perspectives from a wide range of non-mainstream sources.

We've always believed our readers can use their own independent, critical powers to evaluate the diverse material presented in New Dawn. People are in grave danger when haughty members of a self-imposed 'intellectual' or media elite start to regulate or suppress the open exchange of ideas. Today this danger threatens to tear apart the fabric of society and bring about a Third World War.

Here are some of the 'must read' articles in this issue:

- ★ Are multiple crises facing the world the result of a massive conspiracy by global elites to destroy and reshape Western societies? A former insider spills the beans on the big lies, revealing what's coming.
- ★ Two years ago, celebrity chef Pete Evans was 'cancelled' for raising questions about COVID and vaccine safety. In an exclusive interview, Pete discusses media lies, where this is all heading, and what the future holds for him.
- ★ Former Australian politician George Christensen presents shocking truths about deaths and side effects of experimental mRNA injections.
- ★ Mainstream media laud US health bureaucrat Dr Anthony Fauci as a great man who led the charge against COVID. But the truth is very different and disturbing, according to the nephew of JFK, Robert F. Kennedy Jr.
- ★ Professor Jeffrey Sachs led a high-level investigation into the origins of COVID-19 only to be met by a wall of lies and deception. In an interview by The Grayzone, Sachs calls out Dr Fauci and other Deep State players for covering up the involvement of the US biotech cartel in the origins of COVID-19.
- ★ Marie D. Jones reviews some of the biggest health lies of past decades and asks can you trust the science?
- ★ The US military-intelligence complex collaborated with its 'enemies' in pursuit of regime change and fabricated terror threats by feeding lies to a compliant mainstream media. Timothy Alexander Guzman and Dr T.J. Coles look at the unfortunate outcomes for humanity from these secret operations and the so-called 'war on terror'.

On behalf of everyone associated with New Dawn, thank you for reading this Special Issue. We hope your understanding is deepened and you're stirred to greater heights of awareness and fulfilment. Special thanks to everyone who has contacted us to say how much they value New Dawn. Your comments and feedback are important to us.

Until next time, we wish you a wonderful holiday season. And don't forget to keep spreading the word!

The Big Lie

Worldwide Energy Shortage Plus Multiple Crises – All Manufactured – for the Destruction of the West

— BY PETER KOENIG —

Energy crisis? Food crisis? Industrial collapse? Supply chain disruptions? Fractured communications? Cyber-attacks? Black-outs? Hyperinflation? Climate change? Wars, civil conflicts, and more plandemics culminating in human misery...

Yes.

It's all manufactured.

It's all part of the plan to destroy civilisation as we know it, to replace it with the 4th Industrial Revolution robots and humanoids – acting on AI-generated electronic commands and surviving on programmable central bank digital currencies (CBDC).

If we keep sitting at the sideline, watching this crime of biblical proportions instead of doing something to stop this insanity, it indeed will happen. Humanity and what's left of Mother Earth will be ready for the abyss.

Shortages create inflation – and if inflation doesn't occur naturally, it is manufactured. Media propaganda talking full-time about inflation gives industrial and service conglomerates a free pass to increase prices. Nobody questions whether it's justified. The media says there is inflation – so price increases are indeed of the order.

Many crises are not even happening in reality; most are just in the media. By 24/7 endless propaganda. And by Artificial Intelligence (AI)-induced appearances.

Soon to come central bank digital currencies will replace our cash

IT'S ALL MANUFACTURED. IT'S ALL PART OF THE PLAN TO DESTROY CIVILISATION AS WE KNOW IT, TO REPLACE IT WITH THE 4TH INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION ROBOTS... AND SURVIVING ON PROGRAMMABLE CENTRAL BANK DIGITAL CURRENCIES.

currencies. CBDCs will eventually be programmable. They can be turned on and off and programmed to be limited for certain purchases – goods or services, whether you want them or need them. Your behaviour and obedience will be crucial.

Right now, we are being primed for the abyss.

Many odd things are happening at the same time. For confusion. But also for speed of implementation of the nefarious Agenda 2030 – the Great Reset – and, of course, the 4th Industrial Revolution, supposed to make the human survivors transhumans.

That's not new.

Reputed researchers and analysts have said it before and warned humanity of the looming annihilation. It must be repeated until a societal mental breakthrough is achieved.

Alas, so far, to not much avail. Not giving up is the ruling mantra.

We keep sitting on our sofas, watching the mainstream news – the eternal lie-machine. We are royally distracted by the War in Ukraine. The media even tells us day-in-day-out that Putin is the villain. NATO countries must supply more weapons to Ukraine, and more budget support must be given to President Zelensky.

HOLD THE GAS

German and Italian gas deposits are full to 94% or more. This is the case throughout Europe. Definitely no energy crisis. And if for some reason there was an energy shortage, President Putin has repeatedly emphasised Russia would honour her contractual engagements with Europe and the world. And he certainly would – if NATO lets him.

So that this won't happen, Washington instigated the destruction of Nord Stream 1 and 2.

Russia asserted the pipelines could be fixed, but Washington / NATO won't allow it. Madame von der Leyen, (unelected) President of the European Commission (EC) and her buddy, German Chancellor Olaf Scholz – both obedient scholars of Klaus Schwab's (World Economic Forum) Academy for Young Global Leaders (YGL) – are hellbent not to repair the gas pipelines and to let Europe go down the drain.

European gas LNG (Liquefied Natural Gas) storage tanks are filled to the brim, above the average of the last ten years. As a result, there is no space for more hydrocarbons in available storage.

Hundreds of fully loaded fossil fuel tankers are floating in the oceans. They cannot unload their goods because either they are not allowed to, mainly by the European and North American port authorities, who are following orders from the Dark Cult, or they cannot unload because there is no space for storage, or they – the gas and petrol companies – don't want to unload because of negative gas prices.

Natural gas futures in several European markets recently dropped to negative – the first time in history. Of course, these are spot prices. They may fluctuate by the hour – but the sheer fact that they fell into the negative zone indicates that energy shortages are manipulated.

CNN reports: "The price of benchmark European natural gas futures has dropped 20% since last Thursday, and by more than 70% since hitting a record high in late August 2022. On Monday [24 October], Dutch gas spot prices for de-

Putin is responsible for all the catastrophes descending upon us.

Zelensky's Ukraine has already received close to 100 billion US dollars equivalent in weapons and "budget support," mainly from the US and the EU. But Zelensky is not happy. He screams for more. While Putin is responsible for the endless misery.

Think about it.

There cannot be a balanced view unless you take your own life into your own hands and start thinking and joining the dots. Turn off the mainstream media, TV, radio, and newspapers, and seek alternative news.

The challenge is we don't want a balanced view. Because if we did, we would have to think on our own. We might wake up to an uncomfortable reality.

We don't want to leave the realm of our silky-cushy comfort.

Focus on the war is a distraction from what's being prepared behind iron gates.

livery within an hour – which reflect real time European market conditions – dipped below €0, according to data from the Intercontinental Exchange.”

The United States – via the “digital, financial and military-industrial complex,” the currently reigning Globalist Cult of which the WEF occupies a prominent Director Seat – dictates to governments, especially European ones, that they must reject energy shipments. That drives prices down because the merchandise is floating on the high seas, ready to be delivered – but can’t. That creates an oversupply. And certainly, no inflation.

This scenario shows how Washington is seeking to “deindustrialise” Europe and weaken it militarily, according to Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov (also see Patrick Henningsen, “Geopolitics vs The Great Reset” in New Dawn #195).

A fake energy crisis must be manufactured. Because from it flow the other crises and calamities that will destroy humanity as we know it. It is a deception that is a giant step toward absolute tyranny.

Everything depends on energy – fertiliser and food production, communications, water supply, manufacturing of metals, supply chains and much more.

Europe may slide ever faster into self-generated oblivion. Europe has no raw materials to speak of, and most of the energy sources of greater Europe come from Russia, which is “sanction-banned” from delivering fossil fuels to Europe.

Today, the world still depends on fossil fuels for 84% of all energy sources. Never mind that 26 UN Climate Conferences of the Parties (COP) – UNFCCC – have proclaimed reducing fossil fuel use. It’s pure talk. The well-off industrialised world still buys SUVs and 3-litre-plus engine cars (1 out of 3 in Europe and North America) – and corporate execs travel in their private jets.

An orchestrated wanton energy crisis, shutting down Europe’s industrial apparatus, means bankruptcies, job losses, poverty, famine – outright misery. Moreover, once Europe is shuttered, reviving it may be next to impossible, or at best, a long and painful process.

In late October, the Netherlands lifted some sanctions against Russia to receive gas deliveries to alleviate the coming winter’s potential economic and human disasters. As a result, the Dutch may trigger a political awakening of other countries to do likewise.

organisms) upon developing country governments, of which contract terms are not open to the public. This, accompanied by global grain trade conglomerates like Cargill, Louis Dreyfus and others, will lead to food manipulation and consequential food tyranny.

The result is targeted famine, misery and famine-induced diseases and death; a convenient instrument of population reduction. The key Gates-Rockefeller input to the Great Reset.

HEALTH TYRANNY

Not to forget the plandemics – Bill Gates predicts many very serious ones. He doesn't say, but if they are coming, they are laboratory-made and will of course be followed by coerced mRNA vaxx campaigns. The plandemics and deadly vaxxes will further intimidate and decimate the population.

The ever-reoccurring plandemics will help bestow the World Health Organisation (WHO) with the powers to decide the health of world populations, above and beyond sovereign countries' constitutions. With its 194 member countries, WHO is not a real UN agency but is funded by at least 70% private funders (mostly pharma-trust funds); at best, a private-public partnership organisation.

As such, it follows the mandate of private donors, playing a double role, through global vaxx-mandates shuffling billions of dollars into pharmaceutical “profit treasuries” – and making sure there is never a shortage of plandemics.

Currently, WHO is debating – mostly behind closed doors – the Global Health Pact and the so-called Pandemic Treaty. If this Treaty is passed in one way or another, Dr Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, WHO's Director-General, will gain unprecedented power.

On purpose, the media hardly talk about it. Don't wake up a sleeping lion. In case the treaty passes, people will again be “stunned,” shocked and haplessly dumbfounded.

If not stopped by the member countries, and if the disastrous COVID management is any indication, WHO is hellbent on becoming the master of health tyranny, and as such, the ruler over life and death.

CLIMATE CHANGE

In parallel with crisis after crisis comes the climate catastrophe, the so-called man-induced “climate change.”

Yes, climate change is man-induced, but not because of our civilisation's extreme thirst for fossil fuels and CO² emissions, but because of highly sophisticated weather geoengineering. The exceedingly record-of-all-times hot and dry summer of the Global North, the extremely severe hurricanes and consequential floods, including extended disastrous monsoon rains in Pakistan – may be followed by a life-threatening northern cold winter.

Honouring the energy shortage narrative, indoor temps this winter must be kept at around 19 degrees C – or else. Transgressors are warned by many European governments of severe punishment.

Who controls the weather controls the people said US President Lyndon Johnson way back in 1962. A recently released Pentagon paper aims at 2025 for total control of the weather, worldwide.

As for severe weather phenomena, there is plenty of evidence that we are living through weaponised geoengineering, the effects of which may be as deadly as nuclear war.

While all of this reads and sounds like a series of doomsday scenarios, there is a silver lining cycling the dark cloud. Mankind, by nature, is inventive. By becoming conscious of what is going on – in warp speed since the beginning of 2020 – we can stop the destruction. We have always been ingenious when forced to the extreme for survival. This is the moment. ▲

Pete Evans Speaks Out

On being cancelled
On being proven right
On navigating the future storm

— BY ETHAN NASH —

Two years ago, celebrity and former television chef Pete Evans was at the centre of a media storm over his public and vocal opposing viewpoints of establishment narratives. Pete would soon find his social media platforms removed, professional partnerships cancelled, and more.

Through it all, Pete continued to build his Evolve Network vision while keeping a keen eye on what was happening during this period.

Pete's scepticism of pandemic measures in the early days of the COVID scare has been proven fully justified in the light of what we have seen unfold. Speaking out, Pete was attacked by mainstream media and 'cancelled'. However, he is not expecting an apology, nor does he want one.

I recently caught up with Pete to discuss where he has been, his thoughts on this unprecedented time of history, where this is all heading, and most importantly, what the future holds for him.

ETHAN NASH (EN): Thank you for speaking with me today, Pete. I wanted to begin by picking up where we left off during our last discussion in New Dawn #182 (September-October 2020) to tie a bow on that period. At that time, you faced a media attack and became a victim of 'thought police' fact-checking teams on social media platforms. What are your thoughts on being targeted and cancelled?

PETE EVANS (PE): It was really interesting, to be honest with you. I had heard of cancel culture, and I knew some pretty heavy censorship was happening at the start of COVID, where shadow-banning was taking place on multiple platforms. I had already experienced some of these restrictions quite heavily, which was a small taste the last time we spoke.

What resulted from that saga was the complete removal of my Facebook and Instagram pages without any warning that I could see. I think we had over 1.7 million followers on Facebook. I don't like to call people 'followers', but that's the terminology they use. We had 300,000 on Instagram. Close to two million people tuning in to hear and see what I was sharing.

“...THOSE WHO CONTINUE TO STAY STUCK IN THE OLD PARADIGM OF THE OLD PROGRAM MIGHT FIND THEMSELVES OUT OF A JOB IN THE FUTURE. SO IT'S EXCITING TIMES, I RECKON.”

When I was permanently deleted, I thought 'wow, that is a big move'. I also think it happened around the time I had put my hand up to run for a senate position in the upcoming election.

Looking back on it now and seeing what happened, I think that was the real reason I was perhaps de-platformed in such a way. When you look at the Australian landscape and how many people are on social media sites, you can quickly see that large amounts of people could tune in at any moment.

Approximately five to eight per cent of the population were tuned into our pages. When I looked at other news outlets or television platforms on their Facebook, we had more followers – and I thought, 'wow, this is very interesting...'

There was a quote from Scott Morrison at the time; a journalist had asked him a question. They asked, "what do you think about Pete Evans?" This is what I was told. His response was, "don't give him any oxygen." So he just cut the journalist off.

I guess my intention to run for a

◀ Images from 2020 when mainstream media had a field day celebrating the removal of Pete's social media accounts and the cancellation of some of his business partnerships.

years and previous to that, you can perceive the agenda: dumb-down a population and make information about being healthy harder to come by. We saw that through the pandemic.

On YouTube, for instance, they were censoring alternative solutions that people were sharing about building and keeping a healthy robust immune system.

Whether that be a form of turmeric, Vitamin C, or Vitamin D. Doctors were also being cancelled for information they shared concerning general pharmaceutical products; Ivermectin and Hydroxychloroquine are two main examples. We can see why that happened.

...THE GOVERNMENT HAS A DIRECT LINE TO SOCIAL MEDIA COMPANIES WHERE THEY CAN CANCEL PEOPLE, SHUT THEM DOWN, OR REMOVE THEM.

So, when I was cancelled, we were okay with it. We didn't go into a victimhood mentality.

We went straight into a mode of finding solutions, and looking back, I wouldn't change anything.

EN: So, you don't have any regrets about that period? I say this because the last time we spoke, we detailed your attempts to 'play the game', so to speak. Doing what could be perceived as 'outrageous' things in the spotlight to get media attention, thus spreading the message further. You subsequently became one of the first 'martyrs' of the corona period, per se. Given the power you did hold, is there nothing you would do differently? Would you still be as aggressive with the public tactics? Would you perhaps try to play the 'safe game' in any respect?

PE: No, definitely not. I had a chat with someone this week and they detailed how everybody that has stood up and shared their truth seems to have landed on their feet. In fact, many people held their ground and have not been deterred by anything.

Whether it be changing a job because they chose to take an experimental... I won't use the word medicine... as I don't believe it's a medicine. I believe it's a toxic ingredient for many people.

So many people's lives have improved; those that stood their ground and not been harassed and bullied in any way. There have been many positive changes and I can see it.

People are thriving in such beautiful ways, and they have told us their stories of what it was like to go through this period – for them to stand their ground. They're glowing, they're thriving.

Some of them say it: It has been very challenging but very rewarding at the same time.

Sometimes, without pressure, we don't get to see who we are. For a diamond to be created, it must be under pressure for the longest time. The butterfly and its transformation to beauty.

I see these past few years as a time of massive transformation. At the end of the day, people have the power to choose the life they want to live. Some people chose to go along with the crowd mentality, while others decided this is a time to change everything around them.

It has been a marvellous time, a beautiful time, a miraculous time, a challenging time – a true gift.

EN: Wonderfully said. Well, it seems you did the right thing to disconnect as things started to heat up in Australian society. It was inspiring to see you take that step away. But you have been spotted in the wild recently by news outlets [Pete laughs], now with a 'wild haircut' from 'the depths of obscurity'. It seems you can't do anything publicly without senate position with Rod Culleton of the Great Australia Party was the straw that broke the camel's back, so to speak [laughs].

I've come to realise – it's well documented in the United States, for instance – that the government has a direct line to social media companies where they can cancel people, shut them down, or remove them. Donald Trump is a perfect example of this on Twitter.

I felt like I was in good company after being cancelled by these platforms! [laughs].

Look, my wife and I have come to the realisation that with everything that happens in life, there is a bigger purpose, or it's meant to be, and the feeling that we both had was – and I want to be careful with my words here – it allowed even greater freedom being away from those platforms.

Whereas most people may have gone 'sh*t!', 'I've lost all marketing material for any business'. Because that's sort of what social media is for many entrepreneurs – a place to market your business and promote whatever it is you're selling.

What we were selling was information – and I put my hand on my heart because I truly believe this – information that could add years or decades to many people's lives. So, I understand why that type of information is being suppressed so heavily.

When you look at the last few such attention. I wanted to ask – do you plan to dip your toes back into the mainstream world?

PE: I've been asked by mainstream outlets to appear on quite a few of their shows over the past couple of years, so there's still interest from that realm [laughs]. Nothing as of yet appeals to me.

I'm grateful for my experiences in that mainstream reality over the last couple of decades. They were choices I made for personal growth; facing my fears of insecurity and putting myself at the centre of attention, so to speak. But it's an interesting word, 'mainstream', isn't it?

I feel like the mainstream is definitely evolving and redefining itself, whatever that may be to each person. If you look at mainstream television these days... we haven't had free-to-air television for a couple of decades on purpose. I still don't have it.

But, from time to time, I will investigate to see what is going on in that realm. It feels like it is on a little bit of a downward spiral. I say that because ratings seem to be falling for most of these mainstream outlets, whether online news, traditional networks, etc.

We're seeing it happen all across the world, so they are going through a transformational period and it will be interesting to see where they end up.

At the start of this pandemic, I did say to quite a few people: This could be a career-defining moment for a journalist or outlet or publication to lead the evolution of new mainstream content. The only one I see 'bucking the trend' is [Fox News'] Tucker Carlson, with increased ratings while his competitors are falling substantially.

I've noticed that he posts information in complete contrast to his mainstream counterparts, and it's no surprise to me that this is the result. That should be a good indication this is a period of evolution, and those who understand will reap the benefits.

But those who continue to stay stuck in the old paradigm of the old program might find themselves out of a job in the future. So it's exciting times, I reckon.

“ONE THING I DON'T EVER NEED IS AN APOLOGY, AND I NEVER HAVE A DESIRE TO BE 'RIGHT' AS WELL. THAT'S NOT WHAT I'M SEEKING, EVER. THAT DOESN'T INTEREST ME.”

When you sit back and watch it, sometimes you need to do so with a long-term vision or a big-picture view. So many people want things to happen [clicks fingers]... very quickly.

But, perhaps just like a good stew or a good curry, sometimes things need time to cook slowly and for all the flavours to melt. If we try to rush these things, we might end up with something quite unpalatable. But if we have patience and trust and we surrender to the time that some things take to evolve, mature, and develop, we can see it like a great recipe coming to life.

EN: A beautiful analogy, and you certainly know a thing or two about a good stew or curry, that's for sure. [Pete laughs]. You spoke on the decline of the mainstream, and I would say ratings are going down because people are realising they have been lied to over and over again.

You spoke on some of these lies – like vaccine efficacy and lockdown harms. Many of the lies and deceptions are now coming to light. Even the mainstream is forced to admit it some of it now.

I want to get your thoughts on everything that has unfolded. Sitting back from the wings, could you believe Australia ever would get to the point it did over the last two years? And do you think we will ever see an apology come out for Pete Evans and other so-called 'conspiracy theorists' any time soon?

PE: [Laughs] One thing I don't ever need is an apology, and I never have a desire to be 'right' as well. That's not what I'm seeking, ever. That doesn't interest me. Why I spoke out so loudly at the start and still continue to do was... hmm... I interviewed this beautiful man, James Lyons Weiler. I asked him why he did what he did.

He is a remarkable scientist, and he spoke out in the United States. He said, 'Pete, if there was somebody outside my house – a bully or an adult – attacking a child, and I knew it was happening... there is no way in the world I would sit in my house and pretend it wasn't. I would go out there and do everything I could to protect that child or put an end to it,

That's why I think so many people spoke out. It wasn't just the children we were concerned for – it was so much human life that we cared about. As you said, what has come out over the last few years regarding the 'safe and effective' injections. We know they are not effective; we know they are not safe for every person – I mentioned that to Liz Hayes when I spoke to 60 Minutes.

Unless you can show me it is 100% safe for every human being, I won't be putting it into my body, and why would anybody put it into their body if they don't know the ramifications?

It made no sense whatsoever to me and many others, and it still doesn't.

Why would anyone openly trust the people pushing this onto the public?

Channel 9 had their talking heads go on TV and create a commercial telling Australians to take the shot. Who are these people to tell citizens to take the shot? You have people who are TV presenters, not scientists, with no medical training, with no idea of regenerative health.

Many of them are overweight or obese and quite sick themselves. Who in their right mind would take information from unhealthy, unqualified people? And we see this all over the world.

Ministers of 'health' telling people how to be healthy through an untested pharmaceutical product? You don't have to be a rocket scientist to have concerns and questions and exercise caution, especially when it comes to yourself and especially when it comes to your children.

And the results now speak for themselves.

EN: Do you think we will reach a time when any of these people are held accountable? At the moment, there are calls for a royal commission into the COVID response, legal challenges, etc. Do you think we will ever see a period where responsibility is taken?

PE: Hmm, in this country? I mean those two words... 'royal commission', you have to laugh at something like that. The whole notion of royalty is something bewildering to me.

I said at the start of this pandemic that it is a hoax, it is a scam, and royalty has to be one of the biggest hoaxes and scams on the planet! [laughs] So, to have a 'royal commission'?

As we are witnessing around the world, the judicial system, the 'institutions' that uphold the law, are dubious.

To answer your question, I don't really know. I'm not concerned with that. I feel at this stage of the 'game' there is enough information out there for people to make their own minds up.

If and when this happens again, they may be more cautious and not listen to the so-called 'experts'. So, I don't know about being held to account.

Perhaps over the next five to ten years we will see similar things happen that previously unfolded in the tobacco industry. Even then, tobacco is a sacred plant demonised like cannabis.

Cigarette manufacturers, over many decades, had to face up to their questionable actions, including putting certain chemicals into their products.

I think accountability will probably take a very long time. Who will they put on the chopping block as a scapegoat for this? I think that will be something to watch play out. I definitely think somebody like Dr Fauci or Bill Gates may come under some scrutiny.

But again, what I see are the positives coming out of this, and that's people making their own decisions. Having true sovereignty over decisions, having free will, and doing what they like in this world (without harming anyone else, of course).

Apart from that, we can pretty much govern ourselves as much as possible. Complete ownership over each and every action we do in this life, and that is something I have promoted for many years.

If we don't play the victim, and if we take accountability for our actions, then there's nobody really to blame. We get this world on our own terms and act from our own decision-making.

Some people find it difficult to take ownership of their actions because they want somebody to tell them what to do, they want someone to look after them.

When you look at modern medicine, that seems to be a substitute for a mother figure. When you look at modern government, that seems to be a substitute for a father figure. Many people I speak with have detailed this 'mommy medicine and daddy government' relationship.

If people haven't worked out their mother and father issues – and I'm going a bit deeper here – but many of the identities or beliefs we adopt come from our mothers and fathers.

A lot of the deep work individuals can do is re-pattern themselves or create new beliefs about who they are, that is away from our prenatal figures and our culture.

We can cut the tethers and influences in our lives to gain a better understanding of who we are, instead of just a product of Mum, Dad, our lineage, our history, our culture. Because therein lies some great realisations and understandings.

If we're willing to do the work and discover who we are, we don't seem to need to rely on external influences in our lives because everything – including accountability – comes from ourselves.

We are our own guru; we have our own answers inside of us. We just need to tap into who we are and ask ourselves 'who are we?' often enough, and we will get to the core realisation of everything.

EN: I certainly see your sentiments on the power of transformation and the notion that change will come over time. At the same time, though, it also seems as if the state – in a certain way – is transforming into a different type of beast. For example, people were stalked, beaten, and harassed for exercising their democratic right to protest. Did you catch any of this?

PE: I'm all for people protesting if that's their journey and that's what they'd like to do. But protesting and demanding freedom means you don't have it already.

That can be very triggering to people, and I don't mean to trigger people because I'm very grateful there are people out there who chose to stand up and protest – hopefully, that benefited them along their journey. But to beg for, or ask for, or demand freedom – it means you don't already have it. We absolutely have freedom and have everything we need to be free already.

EN: I want to switch gears and move to the present day – a time in which the events we are speaking of almost seem to have occurred in a different reality – as we now switch in a truly 'Wag The Dog' fashion to wartime propaganda and coverage.

I wanted to get your thoughts on the current situation in Ukraine? Specifically, you were labelled a 'Nazi' for sharing a cartoon with a Black Sun symbol on it. Yet now the Australian government is financially supporting a country with a nationalist military unit, the Azov Battalion/Regiment, with members running around with the same symbol on their gear. Surely you see the irony in this whole situation, Pete?

PE: Yeah, thanks very much for asking. That was an interesting experience, to say the least. Being labelled a 'neo-Nazi', in a word, was ridiculous. That is the only word I can use to describe the media sensationalism that came from that. For the record, I have never been a neo-Nazi, nor does it appeal to me [laughs], nor do I have any interest in it.

And I did state this. I had no idea what being a neo-Nazi meant when I was accused of being a neo-Nazi [laughs].

So, I'll give this subject some oxygen to set the record straight.

A few weeks prior, I was posting on my Instagram page and I used to put a rainbow and love heart after the text on all my posts. Somebody came to my page and asked, 'are you gay because you're using the rainbow sign?' I said, 'no, I just like rainbows'. I love when a rainbow pops out – one of the most beautiful things in nature.

There was another week where sometimes I would put a butterfly at the end of my posts, I think this was on Facebook. Someone came on and asked, 'are you a paedophile? Butterflies are a symbol of paedophilia!' I responded, 'no, I'm not a paedophile. I like butterflies because they are representative of transformation'.

Fast forward to this incident, and now it is a cartoon of a caterpillar sitting opposite a butterfly or a moth. I had no fking idea there was a Black Sun on the moth or butterfly, on its wing. What I did see was a trump hat on the caterpillar that said, 'you've changed', and the thing was 'we're meant to'. So, all I saw with that cartoon was transformation. That's all I saw.

Next thing, somebody wrote on my page there was a Black Sun symbol, and this was a Nazi symbol. In fact, if you do some research, it was originally a Celtic or Viking symbol.

I quickly found this out with a search and wrote this response very quickly at night. I was waiting for somebody to notice it. Now, with everything I've explained about the rainbow and the butterfly, I should have explained it a little bit further there – how everyone misinterprets everything I say.

But then, somebody came on and goes, 'oh, he knew it was a neo-Nazi symbol, so that must mean he is a sympathiser or is associated with them!' I had no fking idea, and I'm using that word because it's ridiculous. So, within 24 hours, it was put across every news outlet that I was a neo-Nazi?! I mean, how the fk did that happen?!

Anybody that knows me or knows my work as a chef – and you can read the 20+ cookbooks I've done – knows that I celebrate every single culture on the face of the planet. I'm in reverence of every culture and race that has taken ingredients and put them into the culinary arts, into subsistence, into health.

My last three decades have been spent exploring this wonderful planet and getting to know these wonderful cultures – delving into their heritage and celebrating that. Even in our film, The Magic Pill, we celebrate Indigenous Australians. Their knowledge and wisdom is paramount to a healthy, sustainable immune system. So, for anyone to consider me a neo-Nazi is just beyond belief.

I was subsequently dropped by my 12-15 business partners. They publicly denounced me in the space of 24 to 48 hours without even contacting me to ask my opinion. It was this complete and utter shutdown. Again, it's just ridiculous that some of these people I worked with for a decade and knew quite intimately personally and professionally would ever consider that to be the case. That's why none of them actually contacted me because they knew it was nonsense; it was for purely financial reasons that they did what they did – and I understand and accept that.

However, the one thing I will not accept is someone calling me that or believing that.

Turn the calendar six months or a year later and now we have the Ukraine war. This was one of the first things I was alerted to – members of the Azov Battalion openly wearing the same symbol I shared! [laughs]

It interested me enough that I did a podcast with this beautiful man who has studied symbology and he goes, 'mate, that Black Sun is a very beautiful, profound symbol, used way before Nazis'. He said it was a very spiritual symbol used by so many people.

It's interesting this is all coming out now with Ukraine. I don't know what's going on over there; it doesn't make much sense to me what's happening. But yeah, if there are neo-Nazis over in Ukraine, so be it. You don't see the mainstream media focus on this, do you?

EN: No mate, they are too busy focusing on the real neo-Nazis like Pete Evans! [both laugh].

PE: I've realised that when the media want to ridicule somebody, generally the last thing they use (and will use) is the race card. I've seen this happen over and over again. That is the last-hanging fruit for them, even if it's not true, like in my instance. It doesn't matter to them because if they can use it in any way, shape or form, they will use it. So, when this happens in the future, question it.

EN: Yes, I think it is a bit unheard of for a neo-Nazi to support native cuisines of cultures worldwide for decades – it doesn't seem to align with the stereotype [both laugh]. I just wanted to wrap things up by talking about the future. Where do you see things going over the next decade, and what trends do you think will emerge? I know you speak philosophically and spiritually on many things, but do you have any recommendations on how people can 'navigate the storm', so to speak?

“NOBODY CAN DENY THERE CERTAINLY ARE AGENDAS TAKING PLACE. THE INJECTION ROLLOUT IS ONE EXAMPLE OF AN AGENDA. WILL IT BE THE LAST? I DON'T THINK SO.”

PE: We have all the solutions we need. We have financial solutions that are emerging. Something like Bitcoin, for example. The Bitcoin Standard by Saifedean Ammous is the most important book released over the last decade because it has a solution.

Now, whether that manifests as an antidote to the current financial system – as a new way for people to conduct their lives and be financially secure – time will tell.

You know, it's up to the individual and the collective. Again, free will. We will find that out.

Regarding long-term regenerative health, I believe we have the answers. Getting old does not mean demise in our health, whether emotionally, spiritually, or physically. I actually believe it's the opposite – as we age, we can become stronger and wiser. We can evolve and remember who we are spiritually and continue cultivating all those aspects of who we are.

Diet plays an important role and is one thing we can investigate and experiment with to see what works. I am a living testament to this, and so many others are.

You asked, 'what does the future hold for me?' 2023 involves getting back into the kitchen and sharing more recipes and information for people on long-term regenerative health – and all elements of health. Whether it be belief systems, removing traumas from our lives, or integrating them into a 'new you', so to speak. How do we keep evolving? That's what I want to keep sharing, and that's what we do with the Evolve Network and Evolve Network TV app and platform.

You know, it was always a dream of mine to start a wellness retreat. We must have had three or four hundred people come through and share their stories with us. We've hosted beautiful interviews with doctors across the world; researchers that are looking to find their information.

Telegram is a wonderful platform that so far seems uncensored and without shadow-banning. So many people are tuning in to get information and see what's happening behind the scenes.

There is always a way through if you embrace the idea of finding the solutions.

I believe the present is bright, I believe the future is bright.

The storm that you talk about: I think there's always a storm manifesting and coming through, then there are the sunny days, there's the rainbow, the rain, the wind, and then there's the hail, there's the drought – we have it all.

How do we embrace all of those and not become the victim but celebrate all of the cycles and seasons and fluctuations and the forever-changing nature of our reality? That's the goal.

How do we see the beauty in all of this?

Nobody can deny there certainly are agendas taking place. The injection rollout is one example of an agenda. Will it be the last? I don't think so. Will they use that card again? Potentially.

They may incorporate these tactics into a new 'deadly flu'. Some people I've interviewed believe this will be the case because Pfizer is in Phase III trials of an mRNA flu shot.

If you look at timelines and what's in development, you can anticipate what might be coming down the chute, so to speak.

The climate change agenda seems to be a hot topic as of late. Speaking of royalty, before and now King Charles is the head of that bloodline; his beliefs in that area. I think we should watch that space.

What will come from that? Perhaps what we have seen over the last few years, with this injection, is more and more information coming to light to shine on or debunk these agendas.

Whether it be weather modification which is happening. Whether it be a natural cyclical process we are going through or a timeline we are going through. Could it be nature plus man-made influence? Time will tell and more information will come out.

There are already so many scientists calling climate change a hoax.

One of my favourite books is State of Fear by Michael Crichton. I highly recommend you check it out. It was written 15+ years ago and is about the global warming agenda.

Again, if people are interested, the best course of action is not so much disconnection but connection to themselves. More connection to mother earth. The more we connect with this amazing planet we co-inhabit, the more we learn from mother nature.

That's the best chance we have to navigate any storm, whether natural or man-made. The stronger we are and the more connected we are to nature – and to ourselves – the better chance we have to navigate what is coming with more ease, empathy, grace, compassion, strength, wisdom, surrender, acceptance, trust, and love.

That cannot be a bad thing, in my opinion.

I wish everyone well on the journey of their lifetime.

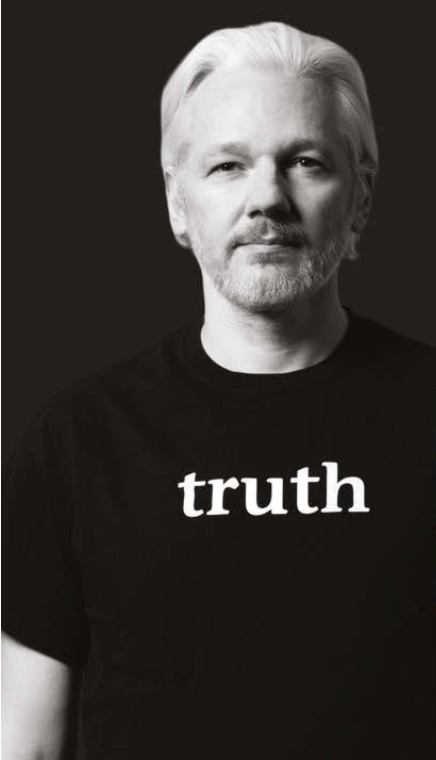

Just like the saying when you're sitting in ceremony: 'Aho, brothers and sisters. Aho!'

'Journey well'. ▲

COVID Lies & Medical Misinformation

The Terrible Truth about the mRNA Jabs

— BY GEORGE CHRISTENSEN —

‘Safe and effective’ they told us. Repeatedly. The question we must now ask is: For whom?

Big Pharma – which made billions out of the so-called ‘pandemic’ and yet carry zero legal liability for their products?

Authoritarian Western governments – such as that of Canada’s Justin Trudeau, New Zealand’s Jacinda Ardern or the State of Victoria’s Daniel Andrews – who got to ride roughshod over our civil rights and yet seemingly get re-endorsed by voters?

Or perhaps the shadowy globalist ‘elite’ who loiter with intent in and around institutions like the United Nations, the World Health Organization and the World Economic Forum, and who believe that now is the time for world government?

One thing is for sure: the so-called mRNA ‘vaccines’ were neither safe nor effective.

The list of side effects as detailed by Pfizer (in documents released under legal compulsion) are manifold. Myocarditis, particularly in youth, is a factor that has attracted the most attention.

‘COVID-19 Vaccine Boosters for Young Adults: A Risk-Benefit Assessment and Five Ethical Arguments against Mandates at Universities’ is a study recently undertaken by an array of scientists and researchers from prestigious universities and colleges such as Harvard, Oxford and John Hopkins.

The study revealed that in order to avoid one COVID hospitalisation amongst the cohort of the population aged 18 to 29, some 22,000 to 30,000 people in that age group needed to get injected.

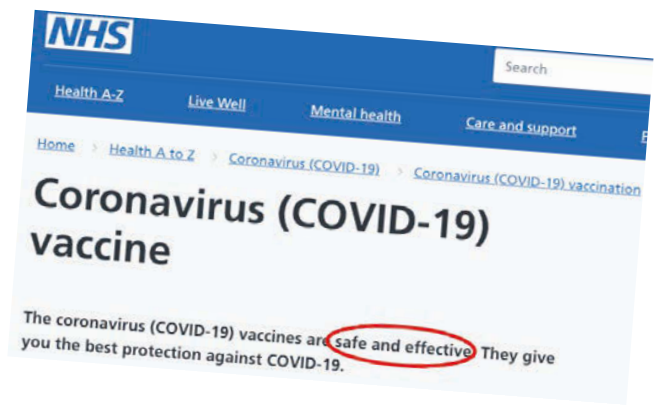

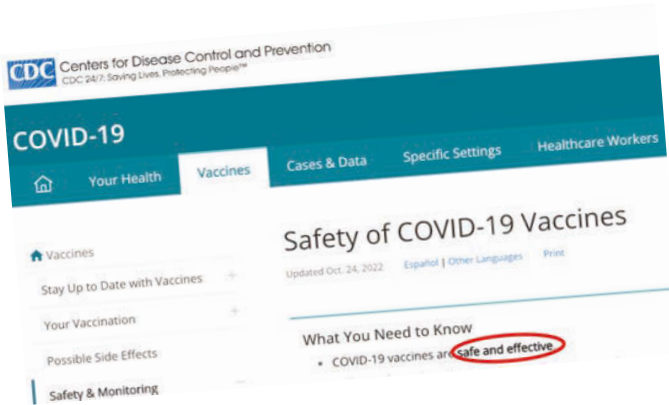

However, the study estimated that there would be up to 98 adverse events in that group, with up to three cases of myocarditis and thousands of cases of reactions that prevent routine daily activity.

In summary, for every one person aged 18 to 29 that is ‘saved’ from being hospitalised for COVID because of the jab, up to three are likely hospitalised just for myocarditis.

Some of these cases result in death, as occurred to young Queensland woman Caitlin Goetz. Caitlin, 23, was a healthy young woman until she took the Pfizer jab.¹ The day after her ‘vaccination’ her health troubles began. She was bedridden for a time and then in and out of hospital. She died with an inflamed heart just over six weeks after receiving her second dose of Pfizer. Despite the evidence, the authorities have not deemed Caitlin’s death related to the ‘vaccine’.

Another common side effect of the jab is Bell’s Palsy. Bell’s Palsy can cause part or all of your facial muscles to become paralysed and while most people fully recover from this condition within a year, in some cases complications arise that may remain long-lasting. This can include chronic facial spasms, loss of taste, and tinnitus.

What is particularly surprising is it was known back in 2020 that mRNA injections could lead to Bell's Palsy – during the clinical trials of the “vaccine” when four trial participants developed Bell's Palsy.²

Yet, as usual, the fake news legacy media tried to downplay that link and social media giants began taking down posts connecting the two. Worse still, so-called “fact checkers” and others started spreading their own misinformation, claiming the risk of Bell's Palsy among the “vaccinated” was no different than those “unvaccinated.”

This can be easily refuted. An article from The Lancet, arguably among the most authoritative medical journals, had this to say regarding the mRNA jabs and the risk of Bell's Palsy: “... the observed incidence of Bell's palsy in the mRNA vaccine arms was 3.5 to seven times higher than expected in the general population.”³

The equally prestigious British Medical Journal (or BMJ) also published a report that “strongly suggests that Bell's palsy (facial nerve palsy of unknown cause) is linked to the Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine.”⁴

Other side effects that are perhaps worse than myocarditis and Bell's Palsy include antibody-dependent enhancement and neurological disorders affecting the brain.

Antibody-dependent enhancement (ADE) is the term used to describe a condition where vaccine-enhancing antibodies against one virus make the host more vulnerable to other closely-related viruses.

In theory, our antibodies detect and eliminate these proteins, thus allowing them to be better primed at fighting a real COVID infection. However, this lies on the assumption that our immune system treats these mRNA-induced proteins as foreign bodies.

What happens if our immune system recognises them to be harmless native proteins? It becomes even less effective when the body is infected with a real virus. This risk is probably compounded by getting more jabs of the mRNA gene therapy.⁵

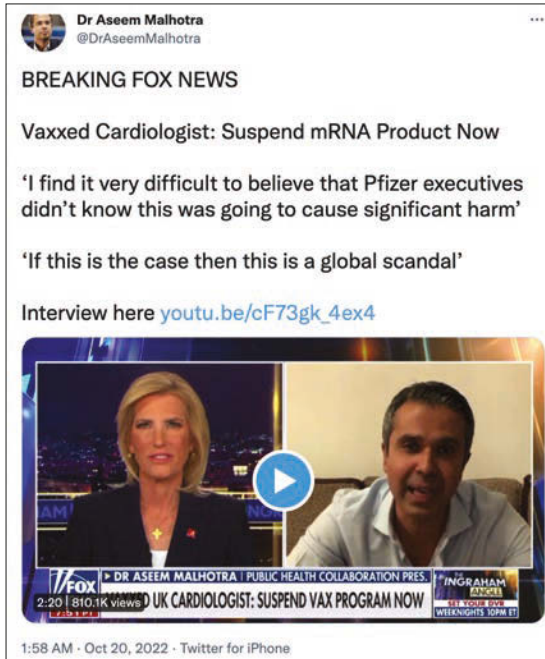

No mainstream media comments on this, and most medical experts keep silent because doing otherwise would be against the establishment. But the signs are there to see. Despite the world's populace becoming more and more vaccinated, the infection rate of each new COVID-19 variant has been faster.

Interestingly, each new variant was more able to infect those with stronger immune systems. Compared to the original, the Delta variant spread 125 per cent faster.⁶

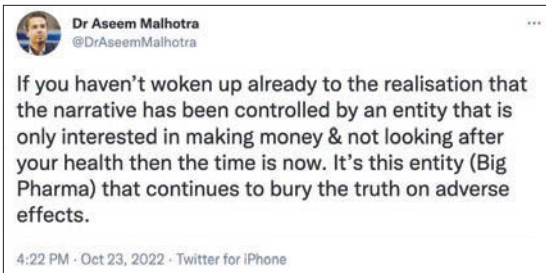

The Omicron variant came later and it should be noted that the ma-majority vaccinated by that time in the developed world had an infection rate a staggering 300 per cent faster than Delta.⁷

Australia reached peak 'vaccination' for COVID last year – with over 95% of the adult population said to be inoculated. Since then, the number of COVID deaths in the country has skyrocketed.

In addition, Diphtheria – a disease Australia hadn't seen in 20 years – reappeared this year.⁸

Join the dots.

As mentioned, neurological disorders affecting the brain are also side effects of the mRNA 'vaccine', but you wouldn't know about it from the fake news legacy media.

When you consider that Moderna has publicly likened administering its 'vaccine' to "installing an operating system"⁹ – implying the control of a system through external commands and signals – it perhaps isn't surprising there are adverse neurological effects.

A study titled "The potential neurological effect of the COVID-19 vaccines: A review,"¹⁰ which was conducted early in the development of the vaccines, found that they risk causing neurological disorders such as demyelinating disease. This condition causes nerve damage, the weakening of our senses, and mental health decline.

In other words, it can create a rather docile and weak person, both physically and mentally, vulnerable to manipulation.

Speaking of manipulation, in 2016 researchers developed nanobots out of DNA that could be tethered to a drug and then injected into a host.¹¹ Another person could use their thoughts to command the nanobots to inject the drug into a specific body part. Worryingly, the mRNA 'vaccines' also use nanotechnology.

Declassified files show that the US Department of Defense had been actively working on creating modified viruses that insert DNA into specific neurons to make them produce specific proteins.¹² The point of such experimentation: mind control.

Could they? Of course not. We trust both our governments and Big Pharma, don't we?

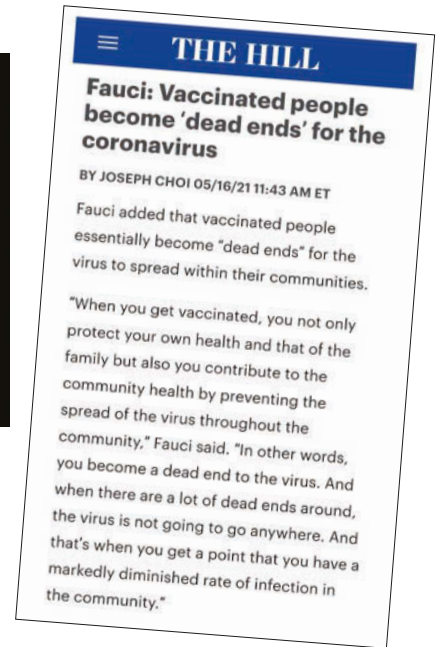

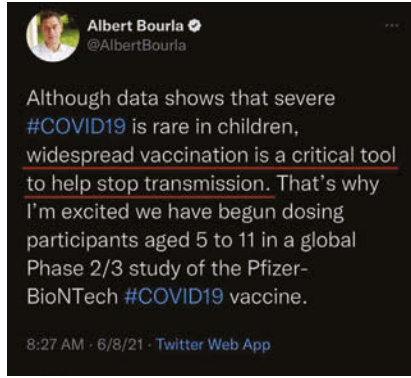

Beyond all of this, it is the opinion of many censored physicians that the mRNA COVID-19 shots risk producing an adverse autoimmune reaction within the body, possibly leading to a whole host of medical complications and even death.¹³

Furthermore, the mRNA shots have also been linked with the risk of developing myositis,¹⁴ an inflammation of the muscles that can go on to affect a person's skin, heart, and lungs.

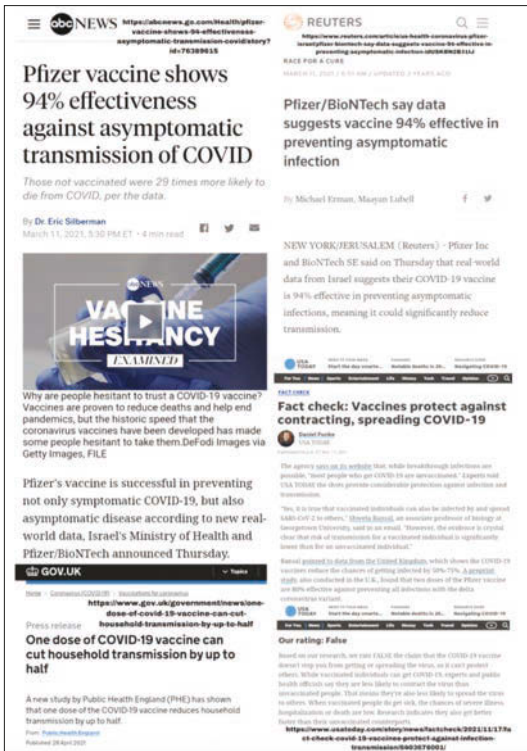

And then there's the gene-editing aspect of mRNA,¹⁵ the severity of which is likely to surface further into the future (e.g., increased rates of cancer).

The aforementioned data forcibly released by Pfizer shows 42,086 serious case reports¹⁶ occurring in the first three months of the vaccine rollout, including a whole host of nasty complications such as multiple sclerosis, chromosome disorder, cardiopulmonary failure, early infantile epileptic encephalopathy, rheumatoid arthritis, testicular autoimmunity, vagus nerve paralysis, and the list goes on.

▼ Below is a reminder of what the public was constantly fed about 'transmission'.

Mr Roos responded: "This is scandalous. Millions of people worldwide felt forced to get vaccinated because of the myth that you do it for others. Now this turned out to be a cheap lie. This should be exposed."

Pfizer's admission refuted the argument that vaccinated people cause less transmission of the virus, the very justification used by governments to impose COVID mandates and passports, which had an enormous impact on millions of people.

Next, the fact-checkers went into overdrive, defending Big Pharma.

For instance, a 'fact check'¹⁸ claiming Roos was wrong was done by PolitiFact which is owned by the Poynter Institute which in turn is funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and George Soros' Open Society Foundations.¹⁹

PolitiFact is entrusted by Big Tech outfits like Facebook and Instagram to weed out anyone going against the globalist 'elite' by claiming they spread disinformation.

Despite claiming Roos' statement to be "false," the PolitiFact 'fact check' concluded the Pfizer executive did indeed say their 'vaccine' was not tested for preventing transmission prior to release. However, they go on to say this was not an admission because it had been known for some time... REALLY? You could've fooled me!

We heard numerous times from public health officials, politicians and journalists (not to mention celebrities) that getting the jab stopped the spread of COVID. Even other 'fact checkers' were claiming that it was false to say the jab didn't stop transmission.²⁰

In a tweet, Pfizer claimed they were working on this 'vaccine' to stop transmission! And Pfizer's CEO Albert Bourla – who contracted COVID thrice since (presumably) being jabbed with his own product – claimed that "vaccination is a critical

Terrifyingly, there's also been reports and studies by doctors showing that the jab has led to a high number of miscarriages, with 75% of women in one Australian study having miscarried.¹⁷

That's the tip of the iceberg regarding safety issues with mRNA 'vaccines'.

Then there's the 'effective' part of the lie.

We have Member of the European Parliament Rob Roos to thank for getting an admission out of Pfizer which puts an end to the 'effective' claim.

At a parliamentary hearing, a Pfizer executive told Roos that their vaccines weren't proven to stop the spread of COVID prior to release on the market.

tool to help stop transmission.” He was saying that in the push to have kids as young as 5 injected with his myocarditis-inducing concoction.

Along with all of that, the claim these ‘vaccines’ stopped transmission of COVID was the whole justification behind ‘vaccine’ mandates and discrimination deployed against the un-jabbed.

If the mRNA gene therapy injections masquerading as ‘vaccines’ were never able to substantially stop the spread of COVID (and that was known from the get-go), what then was the justification for mandates, discrimination and injecting healthy kids who were never at risk from COVID?

Think about every government, agency, and corporation that participated in ‘vaccine’ discrimination, effectively forcing the jab into the arms of citizens and employees who wanted to retain normal social status or keep their jobs.

All under the false pretence that it was for the protection of others.

That jab – colloquially known as the ‘clot shot’ – ended up causing irreversible adverse events for thousands of people. What it never did was stop transmission of COVID. The lies upon lies upon lies are now coming out, and someone is going to have to answer for them.

A dangerous experiment on humanity by globalist elites, and like lab rats, oblivious to the great potential harm to health and well-being.

Now, it seems, the scales are falling from the eyes of many. The question is, will it all be too late?

How many people will have died by the time there is widespread acknowledgement and anger over what was done in the name of protecting us from a virus with a 99.73 per cent survivability rate?

Will we have moved on to another manufactured crisis – a worldwide conflict perhaps – when the COVID agenda is unmasked?

What was that agenda? In a word – depopulation. There’s plenty of evidence that a variety of globalists have long backed the notion of a depopulation agenda.

One of former US President Barack Obama’s closest senior advisors, John Paul Holdren, supported the notion of a global body he termed the “Planetary Regime” which he said “...might be given responsibility for determining the optimum population for the world and for each region and for arbitrating various countries’ shares within their regional limits. Control of population size might remain the responsibility of each government, but the Regime would have some power to enforce the agreed limits.”

Staunch globalist and billionaire David Rockefeller (1915–2017) backed population control, suggesting that “the UN can and should find a ‘satisfactory’ way of stabilising world population.”²¹ Exactly how they can and should do that isn’t said.

Rockefeller joined Bill Gates and other billionaires in a secret meeting in 2009 to plot how to reduce the world's population.

The Times of London and the Wall Street Journal both reported on that cabal of billionaires – including Gates and Rockefeller as well as Warren Buffet, Eli Broad, George Soros, Ted Turner, Oprah (!) and Michael Bloomberg – meeting in New York under the self-styled moniker of ‘The Good Club’ where they agreed that overpopulation was an issue that needed to be tackled.²²

The globalist elites have since been very busy.

This depopulation agenda is now part of the UN's Agenda 2030 (formerly Agenda 21), with the globalist outfit linking the outcomes of Agenda 2030 to population policy.²³

This depopulation agenda is part of the Great Reset of the World Economic Forum, which promotes “overriding our drive to procreate.”²⁴

Then there's ‘vaccine’ pusher Bill Gates who had this to say: “The world today has 6.8 billion people. That's headed up to about nine billion. Now, if we do a really great job on new vaccines, health care, reproductive health services, we could lower that by, perhaps, 10 or 15 per cent.”

What did he mean about doing a “really great job on new vaccines”? What do ‘vaccines’ have to do with lowering the population rate?

The answer is seen in Australia where the adult population has one of the highest vaccination rates in the world. The Australian Bureau of Statistics recently released new provisional mortality data. What it shows is frightening. As of 31 July 2022, excess deaths for the year stood at 17.3 per cent above baseline. More worrying is the fact that excess death rates were rising in younger age brackets.

With just over 111,000 deaths in 2022, to 31 July, about 16,375 deaths are above historically normal levels.

There will be the usual arguments over the ultimate cause of these excess deaths, but one thing is for sure: People died from the ‘vaccine’ and for them it clearly was never safe nor effective. ▲

Who is “The Real Anthony Fauci?”

RFK Jr. Book & Movie Expose the Man Behind the COVID Curtain

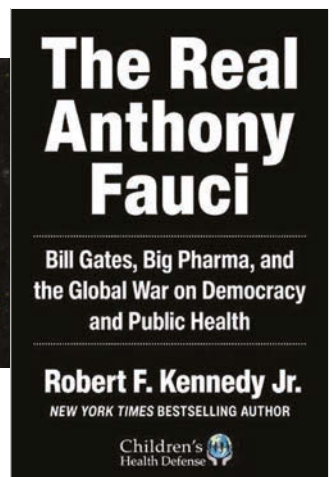

— BY MARIE D. JONES —

Dr Joseph Goebbels wrote, ‘A lie told once remains a lie, but a lie told a thousand times becomes the truth’. Tragically for humanity, there are many, many untruths emanating from Fauci and his minions. RFK Jr. exposes the decades of lies.
– Luc Montagnier (1932–2022), Nobel Laureate

1 7 October 2022 saw the premiere of the Children’s Health Defense (CHD)¹ documentary film The Real Anthony Fauci, based on the best-selling book The Real Anthony Fauci: Bill Gates, Big Pharma, and the Global War on Democracy and Public Health by Robert F. Kennedy Jr.² He is the son of US senator Robert F. Kennedy (1925–1968) and nephew of US President John F. Kennedy (1917–1963).

Award-winning filmmaker Jeff Hays made the documentary in partnership with Children’s Health Defense and, according to a press release, “pulls back the curtain on Fauci’s past and present atrocities, revealing the truth behind the corruption and lies of ‘America’s Doctor’.”

Dr Anthony Fauci is the top US infectious disease expert who became the face of the country’s response to the COVID-19 pandemic. More than this, Fauci and the effort he led influenced the course of many other countries in dealing with the pandemic. It would seem he was placed into position to direct the response and the cover-up.

“AUSTRALIA’S HEALTH AUTHORITIES QUICKLY ADOPTED FAUCI’S MANTRA ‘FOLLOW THE SCIENCE’.”

Those early decisions resulted in lockdowns, school closures, masking, and policies that were downright draconian in the United States and many other countries. Some of the most severe clampdowns on the public occurred in Australia. According to Monica Smit for Life Site News: “Imagine if, in early 2020, the Australian people had been told that a new disease, COVID-19, would cause just over 200 deaths in Australia over the next two years. To respond it would be necessary to lock people in their homes, force them to wear masks, coerce them into getting an untested and dangerous inoculation to keep their jobs, create medical apartheid, lock the ‘unvaccinated’ out of society, undermine the separation of powers by letting the Executive create rules instead of the Legislature, and suspend the laws of the land with state of emergency provisions.”³

Australia’s health authorities quickly adopted Fauci’s mantra ‘follow the science’. Like other nations, Australia relentlessly ‘followed the science’, but the science from the get-go was corrupted.

The Real Anthony Fauci details his 50+ year career within the US National Institutes of Health (NIH), documenting “a pattern of misconduct including suppression of scientific evidence, his disastrous COVID-19 pandemic response, the history of his devastating abuse, torture and medical experimentation on children and animals, his deep conflicts of interest with the pharmaceutical industry and his twenty-year business partnership with Bill Gates.” The film includes interviews with many scientists and journalists who had their careers derailed by Fauci.

In a press release, chairman and chief legal counsel for CHD, Kennedy Jr., said: “I wrote The Real Anthony ▲ Robert Kennedy, Jr. is founder, chairman and chief legal counsel for Children's Health Defense.

Fauci so that Americans – both Democrat and Republican – can understand Dr Fauci's pernicious role in allowing pharmaceutical companies to dictate a COVID-19 response that trampled public health, the global economy, our constitutional rights and all the traditional values of liberalism."⁴

Fauci has announced he is stepping down from his position as the anointed COVID go-to person for the Biden Administration, just as more and more evidence emerges of his questionable research ethics and the cover-up of how COVID came about. He is also under increasing scrutiny over his guidance of the crisis response, including directives on masking, social isolation and mass vaccination campaigns, none of which worked to "stop the spread."

WILL THE REAL ANTHONY FAUCI PLEASE STAND UP?

As millions lined up to get their "Fauci Ouchies" with mainstream media and Big Tech social media heralding Fauci as saviour and hero, questions started bubbling up about his history and affiliations that set the stage for a growing movement to hold the man's feet to the fire.

Treated like a movie star, Fauci was on everything from morning news to night-time talk shows. The mainstream media gushed as he won numerous awards, including for "defending science" and even, at the height of the absurdity, "the sexiest man alive." But few people knew Fauci's extensive Deep State ties and background in biodefense going back to the Bush administration when Vice President Dick Cheney placed all biodefense research under the auspices of the US National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), headed by none other than Dr Anthony Fauci himself.

RISE TO POWER

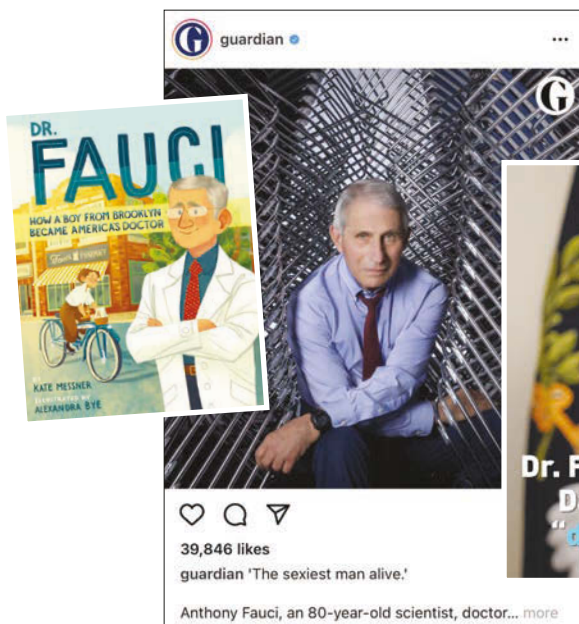

According to an expose by Dr Joseph Mercola, "since 2003, Fauci has been responsible for civilian biodefense research and early development of medical countermeasures against terrorist threats from infectious diseases."⁵ Fauci had sole decision-making power with no oversight.

Fauci supervised the writing of a paper, "The Proximal Origin of SARS-CoV-2," denouncing the COVID lab leak theory, which he and former National Institutes of Health director Francis Collins edited before its publication in Nature Medicine. "Fauci edited the paper and then he used that paper as 'evidence' to support his irrational stance that the virus occurred naturally," notes Mercola. That lie sat at the foundation of the years of COVID response and actions that followed.

In his book, Robert Kennedy Jr. details how Fauci, in his powerful position with the NIAID, was supposed to research chronic diseases to figure out aetiology and environmental causes to protect public health. Instead, he turned NIAID into an "incubator for pharmaceuticals" using his annual budget of $7.6 billion to farm out research to universities. In partnership and collusion with Bill Gates and his stranglehold on vaccine research and manufacturing, Fauci turned much of what should be serious global scientific research into nothing more than propaganda for Big Pharma.

When Fauci was first appointed director of NIAID to improve public health, 11.8% of Americans suffered from chronic disease. Since his appointment, that number has risen sharply each year. Says Kennedy Jr.: "When Tony Fauci came in, 6% of American children had chronic diseases. By 2006, 54% had it. We went from being the healthiest country in the world with the healthiest children to the sickest. Literally, we do not even qualify as a developed nation. We are 79th in the world, behind Nicaragua and Costa Rica in terms of our health outcomes."⁶

In his NIAID position, Fauci is more responsible for the decline of ◀ Deep State front man Dr Tony Fauci has been constantly lauded and even the subject of a picture book for children.

“THESE LINKS ARE THE MOST SINISTER ASPECT OF THE WHOLE COVID SCENARIO. WHY ARE THE MILITARY AND INTELLIGENCE AGENCIES INVOLVED IN PUBLIC HEALTH?”

health than anyone else in the world. He is, as Kennedy Jr. says, the reason why we Americans take more pharmaceutical drugs than any other nation in the world. “Three times the average among Western countries. We pay the highest prices and have the worst outcomes.”

Throughout Fauci’s tenure, he had trillions of dollars at his disposal for research into making people healthier, but the exact opposite occurred. Instead, as Kennedy Jr. writes, he used the money to develop new drugs by allocating it to universities, sharing patents with them, and then selling them to drug companies. “He walks those drugs through the FDA approval process, which he completely controls from the bottom up. And he gets them approved and in many cases he himself profits.”

The NIH owns half the Moderna vaccine patent and stands to make billions of dollars in profits. Four of Fauci’s top dogs at NIAID will make $150,000 a year for life from a product they are supposed to regulate – a massive conflict of interest. How did this one man become so powerful as “the incubator for the whole pharmaceutical industry?”

DEEP STATE CONNECTIONS

The book and film explore, in Kennedy Jr.’s words, “the carefully planned militarisation and monetisation of medicine that has left American health ailing and our democracy shattered.” Fauci and Bill Gates worked with Deep State players such as the CIA, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), and the Pentagon throughout the COVID years. These links are the most sinister aspect of the whole COVID scenario. Why are the military and intelligence agencies involved in public health?

Interviewed for the film is investigative journalist Whitney Webb who exposed how the messenger RNA for Moderna’s COVID-19 vaccines – including its reformulated Omicron booster – were exclusively manufactured by National Resilience, a little-known company with significant ties to the CIA.⁷ She also documented Operation Warp Speed’s Deep State connections and how, under the Trump administration, this vaccine rollout program was sold to the public as a joint operation between Health and Human Services and the Department of Defense. The military was involved from the beginning, and the operation was dominated by military leadership.

We also learn about the 2001 “Amerithrax” anthrax attacks that took place in America shortly before 9/11. Webb says these attacks led to Fauci gaining responsibility for funding US biodefense labs.

The documentary dives into military and intelligence agency involvement in Operation Dark Winter, a fictional tabletop exercise of a covert smallpox attack on US citizens, held at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland on 22-23 June 2001. The event was sponsored by Johns Hopkins Center for Civilian Biodefense Strategies and other senior-level agencies. This high-level exercise included compulsory vaccination and travel restrictions on large population segments, similar to what we recently experienced during the COVID response.

Interestingly, The Real Anthony Fauci begins with a summary of a chillingly similar and more recent tabletop exercise, Event 201, hosted by the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security in partnership with the World Economic Forum and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation on October 2019 in New York City. The fictional pandemic threat was a coronavirus. Shortly afterwards, COVID-19 appeared on the global map.

It makes sense that military/intelligence would be involved in something like anthrax attacks on civilians or the use of bio-weapons against US soldiers. But playing a role in a public health response to a “naturally occurring” virus – i.e. COVID – raises serious questions about the origin of COVID-19.

Dr Robert Malone, whose research and commentary features in The Real Anthony Fauci, writes: “The truth is that DARPA, which is the operational development arm, basically the CIA, fell in love with the RNA technology over a decade ago. They decided to capitalise it and force it into the market space. For instance, they’re the ones that have capitalised through In-Q-Tel, their investment arm, the new RNA manufacturing facilities up in Canada. This is a CIA program. There’s no ambiguity here. I’m not telling state secrets.”⁸

THE AIDS TO COVID PLAYBOOK

Much of Fauci’s COVID playbook is based on his experience handling the AIDS crisis. As director of NIAID under the NIH, he realised that defining AIDS as an infectious disease would allow him control over all future AIDS research, including a potential vaccine. AIDS provided him with the pathway to future dominance. NIAID and NIH partnered with private drug companies and filed patents on hundreds of new drugs funded by the agencies. It is alleged Fauci spread false claims that children and family members could contract AIDS via regular household contact with someone how people think of human contact, touch, intimacy.” AIDS and COVID scared people into avoiding contact with dying loved ones or hugging their children.

Kennedy Jr. lays out how Fauci pushed PCR testing, previously used to detect if someone had HIV. The inventor of PCR technology, Kary Mullis, publicly spoke out against using PCR to diagnose HIV infection, and he spoke out against Fauci, personally, for insisting on its use. He repeatedly warned that you simply could not PCR test to diagnose clinical infection with viruses. In a 1980s interview, Mullis said:

“[Fauci] doesn’t know anything really about anything, and I’d say that to his face. The man thinks you can take a blood sample and stick it in an electron microscope, and if it’s got a virus in there, you’ll know it. He doesn’t understand electron microscopy and he doesn’t understand medicine, and should not be in a position like he’s in.”

Mullis died in August 2019, a few months before the emergence of COVID-19. But Fauci relentlessly pushed PCR testing, despite knowing it was not infected. He hyped the drug AZT, a failed and toxic cancer drug, to HIV-positive patients, even those with no symptoms, resulting in the deaths of thousands within two years from the side effects. At the same time, Fauci blocked the use of other treatments that showed significant promise, such as hyperthermia, vitamin C drips and ozone treatment, leaving patients with no alternatives other than AZT.

With COVID, he championed Remdesivir, a failed Ebola treatment with high lethality, and made sure other options were rejected, vilified, and/or banned from use, including inexpensive and effective hydroxychloroquine, ivermectin, and even Vitamin D. Why? Because he made money from one and not the others. Same tactics, different viruses.

Fauci is labelled a social engineer in the film because he “re-engineers accurate.

“Dr Fauci’s strategy has been to exercise his frightening capacity to silence dissent and mangle reputations,” states Kennedy Jr. “History may credit him as the progenitor – even the inventor – of cancel culture.”

CHILDREN AS GUINEA PIGS

We are learning the truth about the man behind the curtain. In the late 1980s, Fauci helped drug companies access orphaned and foster children in seven US states, including infants, to use as guinea pigs for his experimental HIV and AIDS drugs. Fauci and his colleagues sponsored, with NIAID funds, highly unethical experiments. Mary Holland, president of Children’s Health Defense, explained that if children

The Fauci-Gates Connection

— BY MARIE D. JONES —

Anthony Fauci remained the US “face of COVID,” but he alone did not achieve control over the narrative without a little help from his friends, notably his partnership with Bill Gates.

Robert Kennedy, Jr.’s book, The Real Anthony Fauci, and the documentary film of the same name, track the rise of this dynamic or dastardly duo. Internationally in Europe, Australia and elsewhere, it was Gates who became the face of the COVID vaccine campaign since most people did not know Fauci.

Mainstream news outlet Politico published a special report, based on four dozen interviews with US and European officials and global health specialists, admitting Bill Gates effectively “took over” the global COVID-19 response. Despite having no health or medical credentials, Gates had the one thing which buys influence in this world: money, and lots of it.

It is already widely known that Gates, through direct and indirect contributions, makes him the World Health Organization’s No. 1 funder. In collaboration with globalist outfits like the World Economic Forum, the WHO plans to expand its control over the healthcare decisions of the world’s population.

Gates and Fauci teamed up as far back as 2003 on dozens of clinical trials for their experimental and highly controversial AIDS vaccine across Africa. The vaccine was a failure, but by 2010 the Gates/Fauci partnership had taken charge of the globalist biosecurity agenda.

Inspired by the Rockefeller business model that was largely responsible for the rise of Big Pharma, Gates strategically used billions of his own money as charitable gifts to control international health, agriculture, the media, and to dictate health policies he has no business being involved in.

In The Real Anthony Fauci, Kennedy Jr. writes of the “Gates/Fauci Bromance” that occurred when “Gates summoned Dr Fauci to Seattle to propose a partnership that, two decades later, would have profound impacts on humanity...

Over the next two decades, that partnership would metastasise to include pharmaceutical companies, military and intelligence planners, and international health agencies all collaborating to promote weaponised pandemics and vaccines and a new brand of corporate imperialism rooted in the ideology of biosecurity. That project would yield Mr Gates and Dr Fauci unprecedented bonanzas in wealth and power and have catastrophic consequences for democracy and humanity.”

Emails released through the Freedom of Information Act by the Informed Consent Action Network documented Fauci telling Emilio Emini, director of the Gates Foundation’s tuberculosis and HIV program: “As I had mentioned to Bill yesterday evening, I am enthusiastic about moving towards a collaborative and hopefully synergistic approach to COVID-19.”

Fauci then facilitated other phone calls with the Biomedical Advanced Research and Development Authority (BARDA) which funds vaccination programs. Shortly after, it was revealed that BARDA and the Gates Foundation were financing efforts to develop early warning algorithms to detect COVID-19 symptoms.

The Fauci-Gates partnership led to a $1 billion increase in funding for Gates’ global vaccination programs.

The mass media is complicit in protecting the sterling reputations of these men, thanks in part to Gates contributing over $319 million to various media sources.

The Real Anthony Fauci book and film reveal that this partnership is not about “providing a solution but about creating a permanent industry.” In the film, Dr Robert Malone, an early pioneer and inventor of mRNA vaccine technology, lays out the Gates playbook strategy.

“What’s he’s done is, (he’s) taken his toolkit that he developed in the pressure cooker of competition in the IT sector and turned those same practices towards public health. (He) functionally has monopolised public health through his ‘philanthropic giving’, that isn’t really philanthropy. It’s more of a screen behind which he has made other strategic investments that have produced a massive financial return.”

Gates publicly admits vaccines are the best investment he’s ever made, with a 20-1 return. With Gates’ money to invest and Fauci’s capacity to secure research in his official NIAID position, it’s clear why this partnership has been so insidious. Gates has over two decades of experience building his vaccine empire to monopolise the marketplace as he did with Microsoft. Fauci sharpened his teeth on biodefence research under the Bush/Cheney administration.

For these two, it’s a match made in heaven, but hell for all who are professionally – and physically – destroyed in their vaccination end game. ▲ involvement, even before a US congressional hearing.

“While gain-of-function research has never provided a single scientific or medical breakthrough that has helped us respond to a pandemic, Fauci continued to do it because it was critical both to his salary and to the NIAID funding stream,” says Dr Joseph Mercola in his review of the film.⁹

Big Tech assisted his dirty work and colluded with governments to censor anything on social media that went against the narrative. From the film: “Fauci collaborated with Mark Zuckerberg. There were emails between them, and this is a complete conflict because Facebook is invested in the vaccines. Google is invested in the vaccines. They have a conflict of interest. Microsoft makes the vaccine passports.”

The lies, collusion, cover-ups, and now talk of a deadlier COVID strain being “accidentally released” into the public, demand that people open their eyes.

Robert F. Kennedy Jr.’s The

have guardians. You cannot put a child into a clinical trial in this country without a legal guardian. And he made sure that those kids did not have guardians. They were literally tortured to death...” notes Kennedy Jr. in his book.

Many children died. One grave in New York alone contained the bodies of at least 80 children of colour. No charges were ever filed, and Fauci and his cronies got away with using children as disposable tools for medical experimentation. He also oversaw experiments on mentally disabled children in state institutions.

Fauci’s disregard for life didn’t just include children. He oversaw horrendous experiments on dogs and mice that sound like something out of a horror movie. In 2020, documents obtained by Freedom of Information showed he approved a grant for $424,000 to do experiments in which dogs were bitten to death by flies. Mice, gerbils, and rhesus monkeys were subjected to similar experimentation. He also gave $400,000 to the University of Pittsburgh to graft the scalps of aborted fetuses onto living mice and rats. His boss, Francis Collins, kicked in another $1.1 million.

“From what moral wilderness did the monsters who devised and condoned these experiments descend upon our idealistic coun-

GAIN-OF-FUNCTION

Many suggest COVID-19 resulted from gain-of-function research – when scientists take already dangerous viruses and genetically engineer them so they become more contagious.

The documentary reviews Fauci’s central role in covering up the origin of SARS-CoV-2. He and other funders of gain-of-function research on coronaviruses at the Wuhan Institute of Virology – NIH director Dr Francis Collins and Wellcome Trust head Jeremy Farrar – were so paranoid about SARS-CoV-2 being traced back to that lab that they used burner phones to communicate with each other in the early days of the pandemic.

Fauci has repeatedly denied

Real Anthony Fauci is impeccably researched and sourced, outlining the timeline of COVID and the key players. The film version features relevant news stories and dozens of interviews with Kennedy Jr., Dr Robert Malone, Dr Peter McCullough and other expert voices, including former Pfizer employee Dr Michael Yeadon who came out of retirement to speak the truth about these dangerous injections. The film also includes heart-breaking stories of those suffering the side effects of these poorly tested experimental jabs.

The Real Anthony Fauci is highly recommended for all touched by the COVID crisis – which is everyone. It's shocking, horrifying, enraging, enlightening, but ultimately empowering because knowledge is power. Despite those calling the shots, we the people can take back control of our health.

The movie can be accessed via the CHD website at childrenshealthdefense.org and the book, which features even more interviews and documented research, is available on Amazon.com where it has achieved best-seller status.

Massive Cover-Up Exposed

Jeffrey Sachs on the US Biotech Cartel Behind the Origins of COVID

— BY THE GRAYZONE —

As chair of the Lancet COVID-19 commission, Professor Jeffrey Sachs alleges that SARS-CoV-2 originated from dangerous gain of function experiments sponsored and conducted by US biotech institutions. He also says there was a vast cover-up of the origins of a virus that caused absolute havoc across the globe these past three years. He has endured personal attacks for speaking this shocking truth.

Sachs can't be easily dismissed because he was appointed to investigate the origins of COVID. As Director of the Center for Sustainable Development at Columbia University, he was recently interviewed by The Grayzone's Max Blumenthal and Aaron Maté. The following is an edited transcript.

MAX BLUMENTHAL (MB): You are the chair of Lancet's COVID-19 Commission and recently commented that you believe COVID-19 or SARS-CoV-2 originated due to blunders of US biotech. I wonder if you could expand on that and discuss the role of the EcoHealth Alliance which was a channel for USAID and Pentagon DARPA funding to the Wuhan Institute of Virology, a key culprit in the origins of COVID?

JEFFREY SACHS (JS): The virus SARS-CoV-2 that causes COVID-19

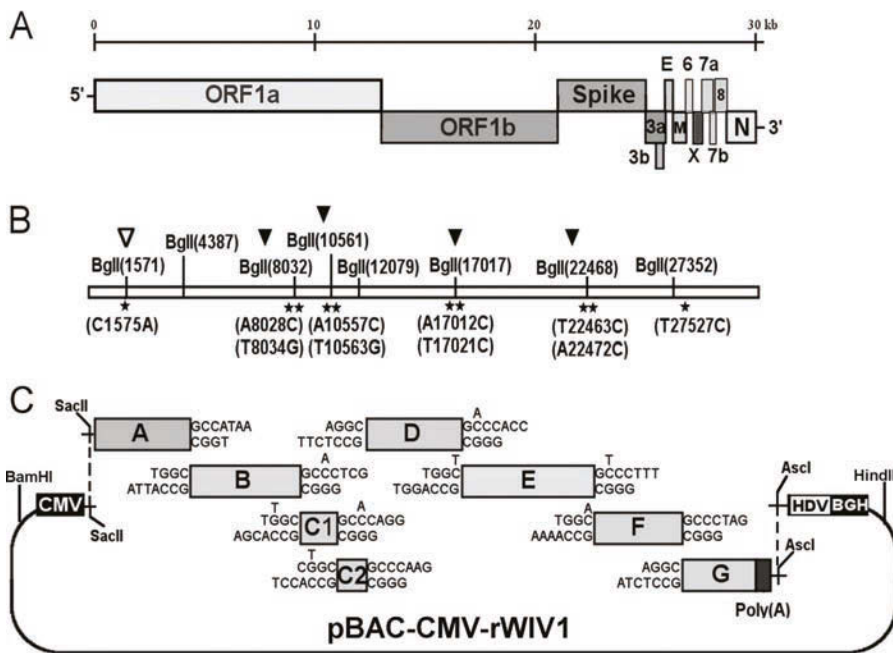

“...ONE OF THE PROJECTS OF NIH FUNDING WAS TO INSERT FURIN CLEAVAGE SITES INTO SARS-LIKE VIRUSES. THEY THOUGHT IT WAS A GOOD IDEA TO MAKE - CONSTRUCT - VIRUSES THAT WOULD BE MORE DANGEROUS.”

disease is a cervical virus, a bat virus, also called a SARS-like virus because it's the same subgenus as the virus that caused the SARS outbreak in 2003-2004. But there's a piece of the genome of this virus that makes it really infectious and that is called the cleavage site that sits on the spike protein that we all learned about. That allows the spike protein to be cleaved or divided and thereby enter human cells much more easily. SARS does not have this kind of cleavage site. SARS-CoV-2 is the only virus of this SARS-like virus family that has a proteolytic cleavage site, with the specific cleavage site called the furin cleavage site. It's four amino acids that make this thing so infectious that it became a global disaster with millions of deaths.

The operative question is where did that come from given that it is the only furin cleavage site in this family or sub-genus of viruses? Well, they didn't tell us at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) but we found out through leaks and lawsuits and all the rest, and because insiders knew, that one of the projects of NIH funding was to insert furin cleavage sites into SARS-like viruses. They thought it was a good idea to make - construct - viruses that would be more dangerous. Why? Not sure, but one possible reason is for making ◀ NIAID created viruses at the Wuhan Institute of Virology such as this CoV infectious clone, rWIV1, assembled in 2016 via type IIS directional cloning. The idea was to generate massively higher viral load in humanised mice than the natural virus they were based on.

CDC with a lot of expertise in this area was completely shut out. Although we don't have the lab notebooks and lab records, what we detected at the Lancet Commission was a pathway by which this could have come out of the laboratory – for sure. There's absolutely nothing even remotely close to definitive that it came out of the marketplace [Huanan Seafood Wholesale Market]. There's many holes and flaws and gaps in that story. Perhaps it's a place where sick people went and sneezed on cages. Because of what's called 'ascertainment bias', that's where they looked – in the beginning – and they decided maybe it came from the marketplace.

One of the reasons we don't know about the lab is that the US government – Fauci's 'shop' – has not told us the truth about what they were doing, what the risks are, and how this group made these early decisions. And because we don't know that, we also don't know what else is going on, what other research is still going on, what other dangerous stuff is going on. What I do know is nobody knows except the inside of the inside, and that is not a safe situation for this world.

MB: Well, presumably, Anthony Fauci knows. We know that after 9/11 his National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) received billions under the watch of none other than Dick Cheney to conduct what were seen as biodefence programs, but which you have just acknowledged could also be biowarfare programs.

JS: Either way, what is not evident to a lot of people is that Fauci's 'shop' is the biodefence shop of the US government. It's where the defence dollars go. Maybe they didn't make this virus, but they don't want us to know what's going on.

“ ONE OF THE REASONS WE DON'T KNOW ABOUT THE LAB IS THAT THE US GOVERNMENT – FAUCI'S 'SHOP' – HAS NOT TOLD US THE TRUTH ABOUT WHAT THEY WERE DOING, WHAT THE RISKS ARE, AND HOW THIS GROUP MADE THESE EARLY DECISIONS. ”

vaccines against dangerous SARS-like viruses or potential use of this class of virus in biowarfare. We just don't know, but we do know there was dangerous research underway. And we also know that when this virus first showed up in Wuhan, people said, 'whoa what is this', and the virologists looked at this in the NIH group out of Anthony Fauci's 'shop' – they said look at that furin cleavage site, what is that doing there and how did that get there?

On February 1st, 2020 there was a secret call – it's not secret anymore because of Freedom of Information – where a group of virologists said 80-20 this came out of a lab. Another virologist said I can't even think of how nature could have done this. Another said 50-50. Four days later, NIH oversees a draft paper that says 'definitely natural'. I call that 'definitely weird'. People should go to the website of the U.S. Right to Know [usrtk.org] which has done a terrific job in these lawsuits. Emily Kopp, a fantastic investigative reporter, has laid this out where they say 'lab' and a few days later they say 'natural'.

Not that they learned anything over those days, but they decided to tell us a narrative. This is how government works. It creates stories. It doesn't search for the truth, it doesn't aim for the truth, it doesn't tell the truth – it creates stories. And for weird understandable reasons that Noam Chomsky and others have talked about for decades, the big media go along with these stories. But they're very dangerous because these are stories; this is not real investigation or reality.

Let me say clearly, we don't know exactly where this virus came from, but there is a lot of weird stuff and a lot of bad behaviour by the NIH.

Very interestingly, the head of the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC) in 2020, Bob Redfield, said 'hey this really could have come out of a lab'. And what did Fauci do – he cut him out of all the process, he played the bureaucratic heavy, and out came a narrative. The head of MB: Let's drill this down. In April 2020, Fauci promoted a magazine article which claimed that COVID originated from nature, and through FOI requests, the public learned that Fauci was involved in at least corresponding and collaborating with the virologists who put together that article. He probably was involved in creating that article, and this was a Cheneyesque act – like Cheney trying to sell the Iraq war. The question here is: what role do you think Fauci played in the cover-up and possibly in the origins of COVID-19, and to what extent can he be held accountable?

JS: First of all, that article is awful, it's called 'The proximal origin of SARS-CoV-2', and appeared in Nature Medicine in March 2020 [www.nature.com/articles/s41591-020-0820-9]. When I first read it, I said oh okay, this is natural, they explain it, and when I went back after I began to get what was going on – because I didn't get it at the beginning – there's this most remarkable thing in that paper which makes your eyes bulge. Where they say it couldn't have come out of a lab because this new virus is unlike any previously reported virus, the reference for that is footnote 20 which is a 2014 paper. What a joke. They're talking about an outbreak in 2020 and say it couldn't have been from a lab and cite a 2014 authority for that most crucial claim. If this were, at the least, an honest paper, the scientists would have said we don't know because we haven't seen the lab books. This is not an honest paper, it was a designed narrative.

What really happened, we don't know, except there was a lot of dangerous research funded by the US government, including NIAID, and they were quite gung-ho on this 'gain of function' work and the technology to make SARS-CoV-2 was pretty plain. We have very clever bioengineers in the United States that charted this out in a 2017 proposal to the Defense Department. Page 10 says we have more than 180 previously unreported viral strains, and on page 11 it says we're going to look for proteolytic cleavage sites and where they don't exist we're going to insert them. And you say, 'holy hell', thanks for telling us, except they didn't tell us, that had to be leaked from inside the US government.

They charted out the handbook on how to make SARS-CoV-2, and then with a straight face they ignore it. The whole time, even till now, these same scientists who reached this conclusion in March 2020 – that this couldn't have come out of a lab – now know there were more than 180 previously unreported strands. Do they change their mind, do they say 'oh we didn't know about that'? No, they just carry on with a straight face. This is not science, this is a concocted narrative. I don't know what it means, but it needs an investigation, which is what I've been calling for.

MB: And on that investigation, Sam Hussein, a friend of the Grayzone and a veteran researcher on US bioweapons, helped publicise and expose the role of the US NGO EcoHealth Alliance as a channel for USAID funding for gain of function research. We know that EcoHealth Alliance was helping to direct the research at the Wuhan Institute of Virology. When you appointed Peter Daszak to chair the taskforce you ran for Lancet, he was already on the World Health Organisation commission. He signed and organised the letter dismissing the lab origin as a conspiracy theory. So he obviously had a conflict of interest. I wonder if you could talk a little bit more about the role of EcoHealth Alliance and how Daszak wound up under your watch as taskforce chair?

JS: In early 2020 I believed the natural hypothesis because that's what the scientists were saying. I didn't have any reason to question it. I was asked to chair the Lancet Commission and thought 'who's the guy that knows about zoonotic spillovers, who knows about what's going on with viruses', so I asked Daszak. No one put him forward, there was no ulterior thing, it was just my naïveté in that first six months. I asked him to organise this thing. Then I learned he was not telling me the truth about many things. It was my eyes opening up and being briefed by several scientists. Jeff, look at this, understand this, this is how this works, this is the research that was underway. I had a two-year crash course in virology with a lot of very generous scientists helping me understand.

But what I did know – and I know a lot about government because I’ve worked with many governments over the last 40 years – I knew there was lying going on, and the more I looked into it, the more lies. And at one point I said to Daszak, show me your project documents. He said I can’t. I said what do you mean you can’t, you’re on a transparent commission to get to the bottom of this. Show them to me. I can’t, my lawyers say I can’t. Oh, your lawyers say you can’t, well you can’t be on the commission anymore. Then the rest of the scientists all attacked me. ‘You’re attacking science and so forth’. Then the next FOI lawsuit dropped and I found out the one attacking me the most for dismissing Daszak was a co-investigator with Daszak.

“ I KNEW THERE WAS LYING GOING ON, AND THE MORE I LOOKED INTO IT, THE MORE LIES. ”

MB: Who is that?

JS: That’s Gerald Keusch at Boston University, somebody I was friends with for a long time, but he went after me. And then I find out they’re all, one way or another, not letting on. It’s not a big group but it’s the inside group, they have the inside track on NIH. This small group talked to each other from the beginning and was assembled to write this stuff, and it was pretty unpleasant. This is about transparency, about finding out what’s really going on. In the lawsuits, NIH released redacted documents and one is the 2020 review of its research on these viruses, and it’s 290 blank pages. And they want trust from us? Come on, if you want trust, show us the document, not blank pages! This is why we need an independent investigation.

AARON MATÉ (AM): Let me ask a related question. We’ve seen these allegations or rumours of US biological weapons labs in Ukraine. Speculation was fuelled earlier this year when Victoria Nuland was asked about it by US Senator Marco Rubio, but she didn’t give a direct answer. Do you think there’s any merit to these allegations of US involvement in a biological weapons program inside Ukraine?

JS: We need to find out. We have a system of government that, in principle, has congressional committees to oversee the executive branch's behaviour. That's what we need right now. I don't know the answer but I know we need oversight and what I know for sure is we have not had transparency on these key issues. Sad to say, since 1947 with the National Security Act and the creation of the CIA, our government has operated in secrecy. We say that we're a democracy but the public doesn't know, we're not told.

When I was young, the New York Times actually used to do investigative reporting, you'd be surprised. They didn't believe what Johnson or Nixon was saying about Vietnam. There was the Pentagon Papers and Watergate. When I grew up, it was normal for a reporter for the New York Times to look into something. Now it's a different world. The collusion of the mass media is absolutely stunning. What we're talking about and what you're doing is so important because we're not getting it from the sources that are quote 'the authoritative sources' – what we're getting is the government line.

MB: Now we're conspiracy theorists if we follow in Seymour Hersh's footsteps.

JS: I was attacked that way today yet again. Many people really don't understand about this consistent narrative creation – lying falsehoods and misdirection – when it comes to these sensitive issues.

MB: It's remarkable to me that more of your colleagues don't speak out more. They did seem to be more outspoken, at least within liberal circles, during the Bush era when the Iraq war started to go bad, but now it seems they've all adopted this mentality in favour of endless escalation. I don't know if you can speak to that.

JS: I don't feel we're functional as a democracy, and the last two Democratic presidents launched many wars and engaged in a lot of secret operations, and I don't like it at all. The neocons have run our foreign policy for 30 years and Victoria Nuland seems to be in every administration. I don't like this partisan game. You know, Fauci's our guy, we can't attack him and so on. Come on, these are issues about life and death. A lot of people still have a partisan mentality that if the Democrats are in, don't attack. I don't feel this is the right approach. ▲

Epidemic of Dying Athletes Since Jab Rollout

BY PATRICK DELANEY

Fitness enthusiast, author and bodybuilding champion Doug Brignole died suddenly on 13 October after offering to be “a test” case for the safety of experimental COVID-19 gene-based vaccines on 4 April 2021.

In the comment thread of one of his own Facebook posts, in which he promoted uptake of the controversial injections, the former Mr. America and Mr. Universe wrote: “Those of you who think the vaccine kills people can use me as a test. If I die, you were right. If I don’t die, and have no ill effects, you were wrong, and should admit it (at least to yourselves).”

According to multiple reports, the 62-year-old Brignole was scheduled to appear at the Amateur Athletic Union Mr. Universe competition in Las Vegas on 22 October, indicating his death was sudden and unexpected.

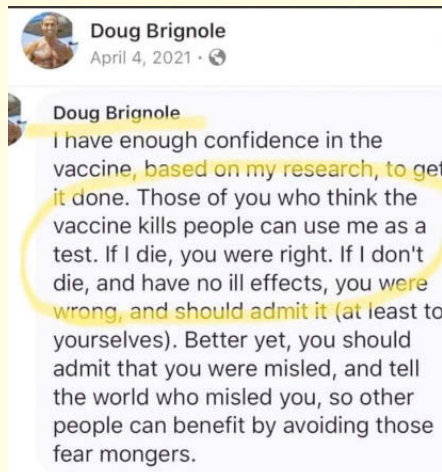

While the tragedy of the fitness expert’s ironic statement and subsequent death 18 months later has received lots of attention on social media, it highlights what has been an ongoing trend of athletes collapsing, dying and suffering serious heart and blood complications since the introduction of experimental mRNA gene therapy injections marketed as “COVID-19 vaccines.”

Last November, Dr Michael Yeadon began sounding the alarm about the compounding increase of athletes collapsing or even dying on the field after their age group’s reception of the injections.

In April, One America Network reported that more than 769 athletes had collapsed on the field during a game between March 2021 and March 2022. The average age of these athletes was 23.

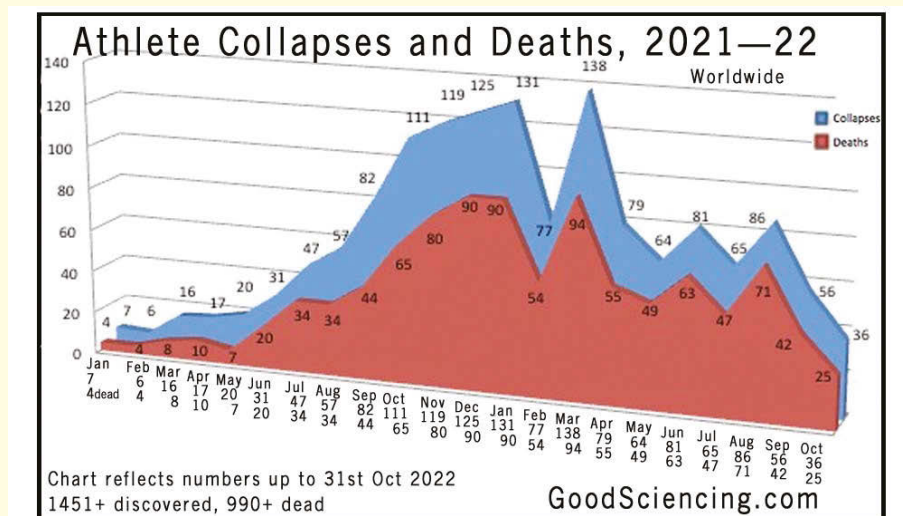

And more recently, a video produced by what appears to be an anonymous source, documents news reports of “1,000 Athletes Collapsing, Dying, Heart Problems, Blood Clots – March 2021 to June 2022” (see <https://rumble.com/v1jaiif-1000-athletes-collapsing-dying-heart-problems-blood-clots-march-2021-to-ju.html>).

to remain anonymous, complements the above video compilation with a documented list of 1,429 athletes who suffered cardiac arrests and other serious health issues, including 975 deaths, since the COVID-19 vaccine rollout around 1 January 2021 (see above graphic).

But evidence for significantly increased death rates is not limited to the sphere of athletics.

Last January, Scott Davison, the president of OneAmerica insurance in Indianapolis, called attention to the industry’s 40% increase in 2021 third-quarter death rates, which were the highest the company has “seen in the history of the business.”

“Just to give you an idea of how bad that is, a three-sigma or a one-in-200-year catastrophe would be 10% increase over pre-pandemic,” he said. “So, 40% is just unheard of.”

Soon after this revelation, former entrepreneur-turned-journalist Steve Kirsch crunched the numbers and provided an extensive argument for why these excess ‘non-COVID-related’ deaths were most likely caused by the COVID vaccines. The MIT graduate explained such a catastrophe would only happen by pure chance every 2.8e³² years, which is “basically never.”

“In other words, the event that happened [to bring this about] is not a statistical ‘fluke.’ Something caused a very big change,” he said (see <https://stevekirsch.substack.com/p/unprecedented-deaths-in-indiana-for>)

The significant increases in deaths are also corroborated by a January 2022 report issued by the Society of Actuaries Research Institute (SOA) showing excess life insurance death claims spiked 37.7% in the third quarter of 2021 over a pre-pandemic baseline (2017-2019). That figure included an approximate 50-50 split between claims related to COVID-19 and those caused by other factors.

In the United States, while the Centers for Disease Control's passive Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) received only around 150 annual death reports before 2021, it currently shows 1,437,273 reports of adverse events after COVID vaccines administered between 14 Dec 2020 and 7 October 2022. This data includes a total 31,470 reports of deaths and 261,738 serious injuries, which include 58,847 reports of permanent disabilities.

There's plenty of evidence that this is just the "tip of the iceberg" considering a 2010 Harvard-executed study commissioned by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) found that "fewer than 1% of vaccine adverse events are reported" in VAERS.

Another study commissioned by vaccine manufacturer Connaught Laboratories calculated a "fifty-fold under-reporting of adverse events" is likely.

With experimental COVID-19 gene-based vaccine campaigns being largely implemented in 2021, including the extensive employer and educational mandates being imposed upon the population, US military personnel and their families have reportedly experienced spike increases over a five-year baseline in neurological diseases (1,048% increase), high blood pressure (2,281%), heart attacks (at least 269%), pulmonary blood clots (467%), and cancer (296%).

In fact, as early as March 2021, board-certified pathologist Dr Ryan Cole reported that he was seeing a massive "uptick" in various autoimmune diseases and cancers in patients who had been COVID-vaccinated.

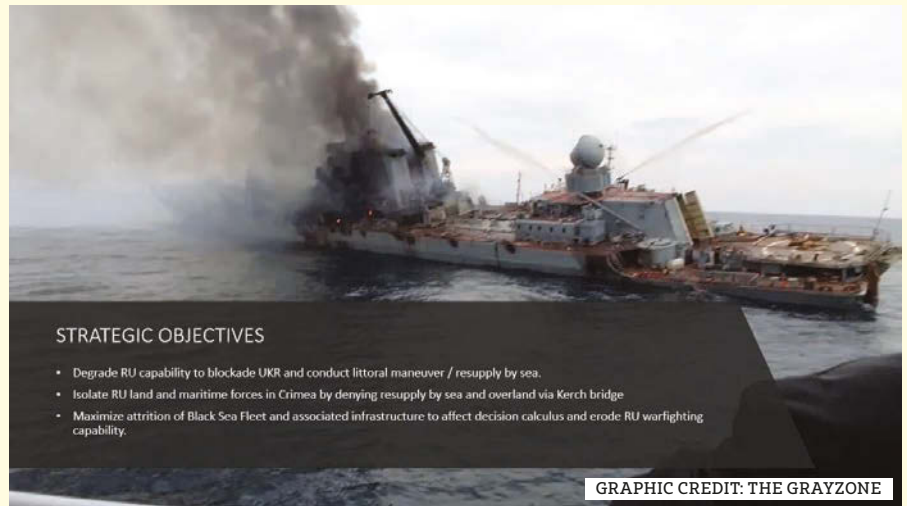

"Since January [2021], in the laboratory, I'm seeing a 20-times increase of endometrial cancers over what I see on an annual basis," he said.

For many doctors who have examined these experimental COVID-19 injections, the increased death rates are not surprising.

Geert Vanden Bossche, a former senior officer of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, drew significant attention in March 2021 when he issued

Around the same time, Yeadon, who previously worked as the vice president and chief scientist in a drug discovery research unit at Pfizer, stated, "If someone wished to harm or kill a significant proportion of the world's population over the next few years, the systems being put in place right now will enable it."

"It's my considered view that it is entirely possible that this [system of widespread gene-based vaccination] will be used for massive-scale depopulation," he said.

Others have said that these shots are a "technology designed to poison people," and Dr Shankara Chetty of South Africa concluded that the purpose of the pandemic and vaccine campaigns is to "control and kill off a large proportion of our population without anyone suspecting that we were poisoned."

Furthermore, "the deaths that are meant to follow the vaccinations will never be able to be pinned on the poison. They will be too diverse, there will be too many, and they will be in too broad a timeframe for us to understand that we have been poisoned."

UK Spies Building Secret 'Terror Army' in Ukraine

On 28 October, a Ukrainian drone attack damaged the Russian Black Sea fleet's flagship vessel in the Crimean port of Sevastopol. Moscow immediately blamed Britain for assisting and orchestrating the strike, as well as blowing up the Nord Stream pipelines – the worst acts of industrial sabotage in recent memory.

The British Ministry of Defense issued a denial, branding the accusations "false claims of an epic scale." But suspicions of a British hidden hand in the destruction are not unfounded.

Investigative website The Grayzone obtained leaked documents detailing British military-intelligence operatives inking an agreement with the Security Service of Ukraine's Odessa branch, to create and train a secret Ukrainian partisan terror army.

UK military-intelligence operatives are reportedly working to create and train a covert terrorist force in Ukraine assigned to attack Russian targets in Crimea on behalf of the Kiev government.

Working through a private British intelligence services firm called Prevail Partners, the operatives signed an agreement with the Odessa branch of the Security Service of Ukraine (SSU) to build the so-called "partisan" terror army.

The work is conducted in close coordination with the SSU and is possibly funded at least partly by Ukrainian oligarch Andrey Sadovoy, who is the mayor of Lviv and heads the country's TRK Lux media company.

"Their plans called for the secret army to conduct sabotage and reconnaissance operations targeting Crimea... precisely the kind of attacks witnessed in past weeks," wrote The Grayzone's Kit Klarenberg who is leading the investigation.

Moscow has accused London of being involved in "[the] training, preparation and [the] execution of plans against Russian infrastructure and the Russian fleet in [the] Black Sea [near Crimea]."

The UK was also allegedly implicated in the 8 October terrorist bombing that targeted the strategically-important Crimean Bridge. UK intelligence officials commissioned a study in April examining ways to blow up the bridge, reported The Grayzone.

Also in October, the Kremlin accused London of orchestrating the terrorist attack that damaged the Nord Stream pipelines. (Finnish-German tech entrepreneur and freedom activist Kim Dotcom claims that an incriminating text message from then-British Prime Minister Liz Truss to US Secretary of State Antony Blinken proves UK complicity. The text reads "It's done" and was sent after the attacks on the Nord Stream pipelines).

Prevail, the private intelligence firm, was founded by special forces veterans, including Royal Marine Brigadier Justin Hedges. Chris Donnelly, the same British Army intelligence operative who requested the Crimean Bridge study, was among the key figures who covertly lobbied for Prevail's Ukrainian partisan program, The Grayzone said.

Initial hurdles included funding sources for the initiative and the UK government's reluctance to let private contractors provide the training services, "perhaps out of fear they would be caught in the act or even prosecuted for engaging in such provocative activity," the outlet reported. Some operatives raised concerns that Prevail initially pegged the annual cost at $600,000 per partisan fighter.

Training sites were lined up in Poland and Greece. Hedges said that if funding needed to be kept at arm's length from government sources, "donations" could be gathered through Rhizome Insights Ltd., an NGO front group for Prevail. He added that the firm was also in talks with Sadovoy's office about funding help.

Russian officials have long stated that they consider Crimea to be Russian territory, and that any attack on it would cross a bright red line and elicit an escalatory response. When Donnelly and his team outlined plans to establish a secret Ukrainian "partisan" army, it seems this was precisely what they set out to do.

Putin: "No One Can Sit Out the Coming Storm"

Russian President Vladimir Putin has become a figure of hate as the Western establishment seek to singularly blame him for the conflict in Ukraine. In effect, Putin has been "cancelled" and his views censored or blacked out in Western media outlets.

To know what Putin thinks, and in an effort to provide the "other side of the story," we are providing some selections from Putin's address to the annual meeting of the Valdai Discussion Club in late October.

Russia's president began by stating the world is entering a decade of tumult as the pursuit of a more just world order clashes with the arbitrary hegemony of the collective West.

From inciting conflict in Ukraine and provocations around Taiwan to destabilising the world food and energy markets, the US and its allies have been escalating tensions around the globe in recent years and especially in recent months, Putin said.

"Ruling the world is what the so-called West has staked in this game, which is certainly dangerous, bloody and – I would say – dirty. It denies the sovereignty of countries and peoples, their identity and uniqueness, and disregards any interests of other states." In their so-called "rules-based world order," only those making the "rules" have any agency, while everyone else must simply obey.

However, the West has "no constructive ideas and positive development, they simply have nothing to offer the world except the preservation of their dominance."

The Russian president said the West insists its culture and worldview should be universal. While not saying it outright, they behave as if these values must be unconditionally accepted by everyone else.

Yet when some other countries, notably China, began benefiting from globalisation, the West "immediately changed or completely cancelled" many of the rules it long insisted were set in stone and sacred, continued Putin, with free trade, economic openness, fair competition and even property rights "suddenly forgotten at once, completely."

"As soon as something becomes profitable for themselves, they change the rules immediately, on the go, in the course of the game."

Believing themselves infallible, the rulers of the West desire to destroy – or "cancel" – those they dislike. Where Nazis burned books, the Western "guardians of liberalism and progress" now ban Dostoevsky and Tchaikovsky, Putin said. Liberal democracy has transformed into something unrecognisable, declaring any alternative viewpoint as propaganda or a threat, he added. The so-called "cancel culture" destroys

"Someone like Vladimir Putin has upset this balance of the New World Order they were trying to achieve by going into Ukraine. And you know, I'm probably the last person that's going to be a Putin apologist. I won't be, but what I do understand are the dynamics that are playing out in Ukraine right now... All of what we are seeing play out in Europe right now is an upsetting of the balance of the world order as they want it – as people like [Israeli professor and historian] Dr [Yuval Noah] Harari, as people like Klaus Schwab [founder of the World Economic Forum] and others. Bill Gates is another one.

– US General Michael Flynn, interview, 8 March 2022

anything that is alive and creative, preventing any freedom of thought in culture, economics or politics alike.

"History, of course, will put everything in its place," the Russian president said, adding that the self-conceit of those who seek to cancel them is off the charts, "but no one will even remember their names in a few years, while Dostoevsky and Tchaikovsky and Pushkin will endure."

Russia is an "independent, original civilisation" and "has never considered itself an enemy of the West." Since antiquity, it has had ties with the West of traditional Christian and Muslim values, freedom, patriotism, and a rich culture. There is another West, however – "an aggressive, cosmopolitan, neocolonialist, acting as a tool of neo-liberal elites," Putin claimed, "whose dictates Russia will never accept."

Even so, Russia is not throwing a gauntlet to the elites of that West, but "simply defends its right to exist and develop freely. At the same time, we ourselves are not seeking to become some kind of new hegemon," Putin asserted.

"We are standing at a historic milestone, ahead of what is probably the most dangerous, unpredictable and at the same time important decade since the end of World War II. The West is not able to single-handedly manage humanity, but is desperately trying to do it, and most of the peoples of the world no longer want to put up with it," Putin continued.

Conflicts arising from this tumult are threatening the entire humanity, and constructively resolving them is the principal challenge ahead, according to the Russian leader.

No one can sit out the coming storm, which has acquired a global character, Putin said. Humanity has two choices, "either to continue to accumulate a burden of problems that will inevitably crush us all, or to try together to find solutions, albeit imperfect, but working, capable of making our world safer and more stable."

In a truly democratic multipolar world, any society, culture and civilisation should have the right to choose its own path and socio-political system. If the US and Europe have that right, so should everyone else. Russia also has it, "and no one will ever be able to dictate to our people what kind of society we should build and on what principles."

The biggest threat to the political, economic, and ideological monopoly of the West is that alternative social models may arise in the world – and would be more effective and more attractive.

"Above all, we believe that the new global order should be based on law and justice, be free, authentic and fair," the Russian president said.

"The future world order is being formed before our eyes. And in this world order, we must listen to everyone, take into account every point of view, every nation, society, culture, every system of worldviews, ideas and religious beliefs, without imposing a single truth on anyone, and only on this basis, understanding our responsibility for the fate of our peoples and the planet, to build a symphony of human civilisation."

New Study Finds the Rest of the World Supports China & Russia

BY CAITLIN JOHNSTONE

The US is preparing to station multiple nuclear-capable B-52 bombers in northern Australia in what the mass media are calling a “signal to China,” yet another example of Australia’s forced subservience as a US military/intelligence asset.

“Having bombers that could range and potentially attack mainland China could be very important in sending a signal to China that any of its actions over Taiwan could also expand further,” Becca Wasser from the Centre for New American Security think tank told the ABC.

“This is a dangerous escalation. It makes Australia an even bigger part of the global nuclear weapons threat to humanity’s very existence – and by rising military tensions it further destabilises our region,” tweeted Greens Senator David Shoebridge of the incendiary provocation.

A new Australian Financial Review article titled “Australia’s alliances in Asia are a tale of two regions” candidly discusses the Biden administration’s recent sanctions geared toward kneecapping the Chinese tech industry in what the author James Curran correctly says “is unambiguously a new cold war.” Curran describes the impossible task Australia has of straddling the ever-widening divide between its number one trading partner China and its number one “security” partner the US, while Washington continually pressures Canberra and ASEAN states toward greater and greater enmity with Beijing.

“ASEAN countries, as much as Australia, have much at stake in resisting the onset of a bifurcated world,” Curran writes.

But that bifurcation is being shoved through at breakneck pace, using both hard and soft power measures. Australians have been hammered with increasingly aggressive anti-China propaganda, and as a result nearly half of them now say they would be willing to go to war to defend Taiwan from an attack by the mainland, with a third saying they’d support a war against China over the Solomon Islands.

A recent Cambridge study found that this hostility toward China has been on the rise in recent years not just in Australia but throughout the “liberal democracies” of the US-centralised power alliance. But what’s interesting is that public opinion is exactly reversed in the much larger remainder of the Earth’s population, with people outside the US power cluster just as fond of China as those within that power cluster are hostile toward it. This relationship is largely mirrored with Russia as well.

“Among the 1.2bn people who inhabit the world’s liberal democracies, three-quarters (75%) now hold a negative view of China, and 87% a negative view of Russia,” the report reads. “However, for the 6.3bn people who live in the rest of the world, the picture is reversed. In these societies, 70% feel positively towards China, and 66% positively towards Russia.”

The report finds that in the “developing” world, approval of China is higher than approval of the US:

“For the first time ever, slightly more people in developing countries (62%) are favourable towards China than towards the United States (61%). This is especially so among the 4.6bn people living in countries supported by the Belt and Road Initiative, among whom almost two-thirds hold a positive view of China, compared to just a quarter (27%) in non-participating countries.”

The report finds that while Russia’s approval has plummeted in the west, it maintains broad support in the east despite the invasion of Ukraine:

“However, the real terrain of Russia’s international influence lies outside of the West. 75% of respondents in South Asia, 68% in Francophone Africa, 62% in Southeast Asia continue to view the country positively in spite of the events of this year.”

I first became aware of the Cambridge study via a Twitter thread by Arnaud Bertrand. Bertrand highlights data in the study showing that US-aligned nations’ opinion of China began plummeting not after the COVID outbreak in late 2019, but after 2017 when the US began ramping up its propaganda campaign against Beijing.

◀ A nuclear-capable B-52 bomber in northern Australia.

Apart from the fact that the USA's immensely sophisticated propaganda machine naturally focuses primarily on where the world's wealth and military firepower rests while pushing its global agendas, and apart from the fact that those in Belt and Road Initiative countries apparently believe they benefit from their economic relationships with China, the disparity between the "developed" and "developing" worlds in their perceptions of the US and its enemies may also be partly explained by another thought-provoking Arnaud Bertrand thread, which I will quote in its entirety here:

A puzzling observation in today's world is that almost no Western leader has laid out a positive vision for the future.

Take Biden for instance. His big vision is "democracies vs autocracies". Meaning his vision for the future of the world is conflict. How positive is that?

Contrast this with China: between "national rejuvenation" and "common prosperity" at home and the "global security initiative" as their vision for improved international relations; everyone is very clear on the journey they're embarked on.

This is a key, if not the key reason why the "West" has no chance in hell to convince the "rest" to join them.

There's simply nothing to join! Except conflict, I guess, but you join a conflict to fight for a vision – for a better world – the conflict itself cannot be the vision!

This reminds me of what George Kennan, the architect of the cold war, wrote: to win he said that America had to "create among the peoples of the world generally the impression of a country which knows what it wants, which is coping successfully with the problems of its internal life and with the responsibilities of a World Power, and which has a spiritual vitality capable of holding its own among the major ideological currents of the time."

Does America give this impression today?

Even in my own country, France. Ask any French person what Macron's vision for the future of France and the world is, what the grand plan is, and you'll get very puzzled looks. "Reform the pension system so we have to work longer?"

The truth is there's nothing, nada, rien!

What we have essentially in the West are political operators. They think their jobs are to get reelected and to attempt to move whatever metrics the electorate cares about: GDP, unemployment, debt levels, CO² emissions, etc. Actual leaders have gone extinct (or gone East).

It's actually quite sad, really speaks to the levels of intellectual decrepitude in the West today. The time of the Enlightenment, the big revolutions is well and truly gone. We're stuck with our mediocre operators.

It's also why this is such a dangerous time. A positive vision brings confidence, it brings hope, it motivates, it makes people look forward to what's to come. The West has none of that today.

The future is scary, the dominant feelings are fear and anger.

And when there's a lot of fear and anger, these feelings need to be directed somewhere. And our operators certainly don't want it to be them! So it's China, Iran, all those "foreigners" who "hate our freedom."

Perfect recipe for a very bad conflict...

Please, don't get fooled!

Bertrand's musings echo a recent quote by Professor Jeffrey Sachs at the Athens Democracy Forum: "The single biggest mistake of president Biden was to say 'the greatest struggle of the world is between democracies and autocracies'. The real struggle of the world is to live together and overcome our common crises of environment and inequality."

Indeed, we could be striving toward a positive vision for the future, one which seeks "common prosperity" and "improved international relations," one which works to remedy inequality and address the looming environmental crisis. Instead the world is being bifurcated, split in two, which history tells us is probably an indication that something extremely terrible is on the horizon for our species unless we drastically change course.

It's worth keeping all this in mind, as nuclear-capable bombers are deployed to Australia; as NATO weighs moving nuclear weapons to Russia's border in Finland; as the Biden administration goes all in on economic warfare with China regardless of the consequences; as Russia accuses the US of "lowering the nuclear threshold" by modernising the arsenal in Europe into "battlefield weapons"; as the Council on Foreign Relations president openly admits that the US is now working to halt China's rise on the world stage; as China declares its willingness to deepen ties with Russia on all levels.

We could have such a wonderful, healthy, collaborative world, and it's being flushed down the toilet because an empire is using its leverage over the wealthiest populations on our planet to work toward dominating all the other populations. This stupid, insane quest to shore up unipolar planetary domination is costing us everything while gaining us nothing, and it's going to be the poorest and weakest among us who suffer the most as a result.

In the Battle for the 'Global South', an Ancient Evil Rears its Head

BY DR. MATHEW MAAVAK

There has been much chatter of late about an alleged Russian-Chinese plot to take over an artificial geopolitical construct called the Global South. These allegations are consistently churned out, with increasing alarm, by the ruling class in the antipodal Global North.

Frantic headlines such as "Putin and Xi's Bet on the Global South" (WSJ); "China and Russia's Lies Are Winning Over the Global South" (Bloomberg); and "How Russia is trying to win over the global south" (The Economist) from the mainstream Western media have only served to reinforce this apparent planetary dichotomy.

Politico declared that the "West must seize on the Global South's state of unease," presumably before the unwashed citizens of this bloc become enslaved in some Sino-Russian geopolitical gulag. If this isn't a case of neoliberal racism pumped up on neo-colonial steroids, pray tell me what is?

Furthermore, as a geopolitical observer living in the so-called Global South, I am not aware of any such "unease" in Southeast Asia. If such anxieties do exist, it will be limited to an influential class who were insinuated into the levers of power by Western governments and their manifold agencies. My recent opinion piece on the British Commonwealth and its abiding neo-colonial machinations provide a backdrop to how this racket works (see www.rt.com/news/563287-british-commonwealth-queen-imperialism).

Nearly all the grandiose treatises on this hemispheric divide are written by pundits from the Global North. Installed puppets in the Global South, who are congenitally incapable of original thought, merely exist to parrot these fantasies – conveyed through the subtle neo-colonial worldview of a Western-led Responsibility to Protect (R2P).

The plan seems to be easy: subject the world to a daily dose of alarmism until nations surrender their sovereignty to an emerging supranational order. The pervasive "coronapsochosis" we just witnessed is just a stepping-stone towards this end.

Sound policies that may ringfence nations during the current VUCA (volatility, uncertainty, complexity and ambiguity) era are routinely suppressed by "experts" from the Global North and their agitprop jesters down South. It is a lucrative plan. The global sustainable development sector is worth $20 trillion per year – representing nearly one third of the global GDP – and the South represents a green field that can be pillaged by profiteers from the North. Couched, of course, under the banner of humane philanthropy!

A GEOGRAPHIC CONSTRUCT?

Take a look at the map of the Global North-South divide today (above). It is a stark reminder of a legacy divide between modern-era colonisers (i.e., from 1500 CE) and the colonised. Russia too was a colonising power right up to either 1917 or 1991 – depending on one's historical bias – and was therefore placed within the Global North. Its actions since the breakup of the USSR however have not conformed to the rules of the new and improvised Great Game. Instead of spoliating its own citizens and the Global South, Moscow seems more concerned with NATO's encroachment on its doorsteps.

There are also a few geographic incongruities in the Global North construct as it includes nations such as Singapore, Australia, and New Zealand. This anomaly can – on rare occasions – lead to brief diplomatic flare-ups.

The former prime minister of Singapore, Lee Kuan Yew, once warned that Australia could become the poor "white trash of Asia," leaving Western pundits to conduct endless damage control exercises since the alleged outburst was recorded. It was Samuel P. Huntington who situated Lee's polemic within the context of who gets to become the United States' sheriff in Southeast Asia. (Relentless Australian police brutality, wrought by an incurably mass "coronapsochosis," seems to have vindicated Lee).

Former US President George W. Bush settled matters over the choice of sheriff by picking Canberra in 2003. Around the same time, the Australian and New Zealand governments began accelerating an indigenised Morgenthau Plan (that was originally intended for post-WWII Germany) by systematically dismantling their manufacturing capabilities. If the reader needs a little shock here, consider the fact that there were millionaire enclaves, a mere 90-minute drive from Brisbane, that still lacked basic ADSL or fibre optic connections in 2017!

The Global North maintains a rigid pecking order that pre-empts any risk of technological challenges from its peripheries. To paraphrase Tolkien, there can only be one signet ring "to rule them all, one ring to find them, one ring to bring them all, and in the darkness bind them."

That sums up the globalist plan but who wields that ring today?

Russian President Vladimir Putin coincidentally hinted at this darkness during a treaty signing ceremony over the incorporation of four new regions to Russia. Putin referenced the "dictatorship of the Western elites" which targeted "all societies," including the "citizens of Western countries themselves." This dictatorship entailed a "renunciation of traditional values" that amounted to "pure satanism." He even quoted the Bible, specifically Matthew 7:16 which begins with "Ye shall know them by their fruits..."

But is there a biblical or historical basis to Putin's tirade?

FRUITS OF A SATANIC TREE?

Long before the North-South divide was dreamt up, there existed a real East-West bipolarity in the ancient global order. The East was primarily dominated by India and China, with both civilisations consistently cornering up to half of the global GDP until the late 1600s – the era of Western colonialism.

It isn't unreasonable to treat Western colonialism as a revival of the ancient Roman empire. And for good reasons too. As Rome imposed its rule, its norms and its gods on conquered realms two millennia ago, its gold was however haemorrhaging to ancient India in exchange for spices, muslin and silk. It is quite telling that Roman learning, technology and military hardware hardly interested the Indians, only its gold. When Christianity and Judaism faced persecution in Rome, its adherents found refuge in the Indian subcontinent. Faced with such recalcitrant centres of power, the seeds of a unified Western-led global order were sown, ultimately growing into a predatory colonial tree. European trade guilds began to don the cloak of mystery fraternities which promised enlightenment to its initiates. The Western nobility, which profited immensely from these guilds, ensured that their mystery mumbo-jumbo would co-exist with organised Catholicism.

The contradictions however were too great to be reconciled. Europe and its churches were eventually plunged into the Dark Ages. It only emerged out of a millennia of obscurantism when the German house of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg and the Saxon duchies began a new monarchical hierarchy in Europe. The Protestant Reformation acted as an irritant but not an impediment. The Saxon duchies later birthed the German house of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha which was conveniently renamed Windsor in the United Kingdom in 1917. The cuckolded genealogies of these dynasties are as legitimate as the mumbo-jumbo mysteries which bound them.

The Catholic-Protestant-Orthodox divides gradually mattered less and less to European monarchs who patronised their respective national churches. Casualties of religious wars were generally restricted to the rabble, much like today.

As colonialism, in particular Pax Britannica, reared its head, the concept of the global policeman was born. Giddy scientific rationalism also began to take root. Divinity, as defined by the Gospels, was viciously attacked. As Karl Marx declared: "My object in life is to dethrone God and destroy capitalism."

The offshoots of these contradictions continue to confuse, divide, and conquer societies. In the West, gender dysphoria has reached a point of no return. Men can supposedly give birth and breastfeed children. Children are incessantly subjected to Drag Queen shows in schools. Mentioning the colour white is like stepping onto a landmine. This new "science" – promoted by elitist Western institutions no less – should be called "wokology" for want of a better catch-all term.

Social divisions are festering worldwide at a pace that is unprecedented in history. The North-South divide is just a sideshow in the scheme of things. Relentless wealth fractionation is leading to a dystopian promise of "you'll own nothing and you'll be happy" by 2030. If this isn't a contradiction of the highest magnitude, pray tell me what is? Besides, isn't the total loss of ownership tantamount to slavery?

There are no historical precedents to the epoch we are entering. However, there is a biblical mention of an entity of poisonous fruits which Putin had referenced in his speech. In the book of Revelations, this entity is called "Mystery Babylon" and it deceives all nations through rapacious mercantilism, colonialism, slavery and deception. As well as "sorceries" which in the original Greek spells out as "pharmakeia."

Now, does that sound familiar?

All Roads (& Railways) Leading to China... and the West Ain't Happy

BY FINIAN CUNNINGHAM

China's ascendant global power is showing up the increasingly bankrupt condition of the United States and its Western allies.

China is succeeding where the British, French and Japanese imperialist powers failed. This year saw the full operation of the China-Laos Railway, the first link in an ambitious Pan-Asian Rail Network that will integrate eight Southeast Asian nations designed to carry freight and millions of passengers.

The city of Kunming in China's southwestern province of Yunnan is the rail and road hub linking the world's second-biggest economy to its southern neighbours. The Pan-Asian Rail Network covers Myanmar, Laos, Vietnam, Thailand and Cambodia, converging on the port cities of Kuala Lumpur and Singapore (see above map).

Kunming, already connected to Beijing, Shanghai and Guangzhou and other Chinese metropolises, is thus providing a gateway for the entire Southeast Asian region to global trading routes. It represents China's world-spanning Belt and Road Initiative in action.

The China-Laos segment of this transcontinental network was completed in December 2021 – on schedule after five years of construction – with a budget of $6 billion. The other regional segments are still under construction. A network of new motorway "expressways" complement the rail links, the configuration resembling a Chinese fan spreading out.

The Pan-Asian Rail Network is planned for completion by 2030 at a total cost of $112 billion. Some 30,000 kms of tracks will be laid, carrying both high-speed and conventional speed trains. Beijing is financing up to 70 percent of the construction costs, with the remainder capitalised through bilateral loans. The overall design is backed by the inter-governmental trade bloc, the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN).

It is an awesome mega-project that is aimed at boosting economic growth for the region. Inner land areas are to be opened up for agriculture, tourism and transport of goods.

Over a century ago, the British and French colonial powers attempted to build railways in Southeast Asia – and failed. A combination of world wars and financial burden derailed former projects. The Japanese imperialists tried to link Thailand and Myanmar (Burma) with an infamous railroad built by prisoners of war – and failed. Now China is laying down infrastructure based on a wholly different concept of partnership and joint development.

The achievement of the China-Laos rail link alone is impressive. It covers over 1,000 kilometres from Kunming to Vientiane, the Laotian capital. It required the building of hundreds of tunnels and bridges through mountainous territory spanning twice the meandering Mekong River.

President Thongloun Sisoulith of Laos hailed the railway as “opening a new era of development and prosperity” for his landlocked and relatively poor nation of 7 million people. It’s a stellar example of the “win-win” philosophy that guides the comprehensive BRI vision espoused by Chinese President Xi Jinping.

The Belt and Road Initiative was launched by President Xi in 2013. Already nine years old, the BRI has seen 146 nations joining the global partnership which is explicitly based on multipolar co-development. The Pan-Asian Rail Network is an embodiment of that vision.

One would think that such a vision for mutual prosperity and peaceful partnership might be welcomed by all. Not so among the US-led Western powers and allies.

American and allied news media have embarked on a relentless campaign to deni-grate and demonise China and its BRI projects.

The Australian Financial Review ran a recent article with the dubious headline: “Can the West Dismantle China’s Pan-Asian Railway Dream?” The article went on to say: “Fast train plans are a concern for Western nations worried about China’s growing influence in the region.”

The Financial Review doesn’t explain the means or legalities of “dismantling” these projects. Neither does it spell out the justification for “concerns” about China’s growing influence. The tacit assumption is based on a notion of Sinophobia and a self-ordained right by the West to destroy China’s investments and infrastructure projects. The self-appointed West evidently feels entitled to judge and act unilaterally – even criminally – with impunity and without consulting the opinion of countries that have embraced mutual partnerships with China.

The US government-owned Radio Free Asia continually alleges that China is seeking to dominate its regional neighbours through “debt traps.” This “debt-trap” accusation is a recurring insinuation by Western media to undermine China’s bilateral relations. There is an arrogant assumption by Western powers that they know better than Laos and other BRI participating nations. There is also a dubious pretence that the United States and its allies are somehow the sole benefactors of other nations, uniquely looking out for their national well-being. The facts are contrary to such pretensions. It is the Western capitalist states that have historically used financial debt to subjugate and control developing nations for exploitation of their natural resources.

Shouldn’t Western powers perhaps consult with China’s BRI partners about how they actually assess their prospects? In all the reams of negative reporting, Western media rarely if ever report the willing partnering with China of countries like Laos. It’s like their opinions don’t count. The United States and its Western allies simply presume to know better.

The negative claims by the United States regarding China’s BRI in Southeast Asia and in Laos in particular are bitterly ironic. During the Vietnam War, the US dropped over 260 million bombs on Laos between 1964-73 in a covert operation dubbed Rolling Barrel aimed at defeating the North Vietnamese army and Vietcong guerrilla. That criminal American aggression made Laos the “most bombed country in history” – exceeding the tonnage of explosives dropped during the Second World War. Over 50,000 Laotian people were killed by the American carpet bombing, which until today has left an odious legacy of deadly cluster bombs scattered over the mountainous jungles. Indeed a major part of China’s rail construction involved extensive de-mining and clearing of American unexploded ordnance across remote terrain.

Despite Western attempts to smear China’s BRI, it is pushing ahead unabated. Southeast Asia demonstrates eloquently that all roads and railways are leading to China which is set to supplant the United States as the world’s biggest economy. And the West is evidently not happy about that because it threatens US-led hegemony and its ambitions of unipolar dominance.

China’s ascendant global power, based on partnership and mutual development, is showing up the increasingly bankrupt condition of the United States and its Western allies. These has-been capitalist powers are coming off their rails, if not the owners of train-wreck economies.

The Greatest Health Lies Ever Told

— BY MARIE D. JONES —

When it comes to our health, we are way too trusting of industries that are in business to earn a profit, often at our expense. We believe our health professionals' primary concern is our well-being, not their wallets. We accept at face value anything told to us by "experts" in the media and vilify those who dare to question these experts, even when they lie.

Sometimes lies are nothing more than great marketing. For example, ever wonder why you are told to walk 10,000 steps a day? It came from a 1965 Japanese company called Yamasa Toki that introduced their new product, a step-counter called Manpo-Kei. This translated into "10,000 steps meter" and the company marketed their device with the slogan, "Let's walk 10,000 steps a day," which took off among Japanese walking clubs, and then, the world.

In this case, the end result was a positive and healthy one.

Not every health "lie" is.

SMOKING IS SAFE!

For decades, cigarette ads touted their product as healthy and sometimes included pregnant women and doctors puffing away. Cigarettes were all the rage until links between smoking and cancer got too big to ignore.

In 2006, Big Tobacco was in big trouble when the US District Court for the District of Columbia found tobacco companies guilty of breaking civil racketeering laws, marketing to children and minorities, and lying about the dangers of smoking. Judge Gladys Kessler wrote in her ruling, "Substantial evidence establishes that tobacco companies have engaged in and executed – and continue to engage in and execute – a massive 50-year scheme to defraud the public."

Big Tobacco companies Lorillard, Inc.; Altria, owner of Phillip Morris USA; RJ Reynolds Tobacco, owner of Winston-Salem, who that year spent over $12.5 billion in advertising, were forced to admit they knew of the dangers, publish corrective and educational statements about the dangers of tobacco in national newspapers, and air corrective statements on American media five times per week for a year. They also had to affix a warning statement to a number of cigarette packs for two years and finance anti-smoking ads and campaigns.

Sadly, it was too late for the average 1,200 Americans dying of smoking every day or the millions who much later developed various cancers, heart disease, emphysema, leukaemia, reduced fertility rates, and nicotine addictions.

It was a Big Lie that woke many people up from decades of propaganda and manipulation as more research exposed the cancer connection, including to second-hand smoke. Unfortunately, it was not the only Big Lie.

SUGAR IS SAFE!

If cigarettes didn't kill us, the side effects of a diet rich in this product might.

Sugar.

The average adult in the United States consumes the most sugar, coming in at 126 grams daily. Germany is right behind with 102 grams. [The average Australian consumes 60 grams.] Children in the US alone consume about 17 teaspoons of sugar each day up until the age of 19.

Sugar goes by many names including high fructose corn syrup, dextrose, sucralose, and maltodextrin and is found in processed products and treats, but also in many foods you might never suspect, such as “natural” salad dressings, sauces, baby foods, and more. It has been directly linked to inflammation, cancer, heart disease, diabetes, kidney disease, rising obesity in adults and children, and other illnesses, yet for decades it was celebrated as healthy.

Instead, the bulls-eye target was on something humans had consumed for hundreds of years without the proliferation of heart disease, obesity, or cancers.

Fat.

During the 1960s, the sugar industry paid scientists to perform research studies that played down the links between sugar and heart disease and instead placed the blame on saturated fats, according to internal industry documents published in 2016 by JAMA Internal Medicine. These documents showed a five-decade-long collection of research into nutrition and heart disease, accusing saturated fats as the main culprit behind heart disease while conveniently exonerating sugar.

According to the 12 September 2016 New York Times “How the Sugar Industry Shifted Blame to Fat” by Anahad O’Connor, this was a concerted propaganda campaign that involved the Sugar Research Foundation paying three Harvard scientists to publish a review on sugar, fat, and heart disease that featured hand-picked studies minimising the links between sugar and heart disease and promoting the links between fat and heart disease. Coca-Cola also paid millions of dollars in funding to researchers to downplay the links between sugar and obesity.

These faulty and fraudulent industry-sponsored studies became the foundation of a decades-long propaganda push to eliminate fats from our diet and push “healthy” low-fat foods. Carbohydrates in cereals and treats were fine, but a good piece of steak from the local butcher would clog your arteries and send you to the ER. Because the propaganda campaign was so pervasive and those scientists who questioned the narrative were ignored or silenced, people bought it and consumed sugar to the detriment of their health.

In “Big Fat Lies – A Half Century of Sugary Propaganda Has Made Us Sick” by Brian Krans for Healthline, the sugar industry bought up the advertising necessary to drive home their skewed research. Krans wrote that “Big Sugar” often restructured conversations around health and choice by establishing front organisations to steer the dialogue in their favour. These front organisations used names that made them sound scientific and pro-consumer and paid consultants to speak at conventions and testify at public hearings.

“During the 1960s, the sugar industry steered public policy away from recommending reduced sugar consumption for children because it caused cavities. Like the tobacco industry, it was able to protect itself from damaging research. It achieved this by adopting a strategy to deflect attention to public health interventions that would reduce the harms of sugar consumption rather than restricting intake.”

The 2016 JAMA Internal Medicine paper raised even more alarms, according to “50 Years Ago, Sugar Industry Quietly Paid Scientists to Point Blame at Fat” by Camila Domonoske for the 13 September 2016 NPR. JAMA drew on internal documents indicating the Sugar Research Foundation wanted to “refute” concerns about sugar’s possible role in heart disease. The SRF sponsored the research by Harvard scientists and the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine, then published the research in 1967 without disclosing the sugar industry’s funding. The NPR story quotes John Hickson, then SRF vice president and director of research, as having inserted into one document his recommendation that the industry fund its own research studies. “Then we can publish the data and refute our detractors.”

The following year, after several scientific articles were published linking sucrose and coronary heart disease, the SRF quickly approved the above literature review project and paid approximately $50,000 for the research supporting their pro-sugar goals. Studies that went against their message were dismissed for a variety of trivial reasons, such as one study that found a health benefit when people ate less sugar and more vegetables, dismissed on the grounds that such a dietary change was “not feasible.”

The Harvard researchers who turned their focus on the dangers of fats ironically used the “same kind of epidemiological studies they had dismissed when it came to sugar,” Domonske wrote. Their conclusion was that cutting out all fat was the best dietary intervention to protect someone against coronary heart disease.

Heart disease is the number one health-related killer and has been for a long time.

STATINS ARE SAFE!

Another great lie was told to millions of people who believe if they don't take statins, they will die of a heart attack. They believe this because their doctors tell them so and because television ads (in the USA) by pharmaceutical companies scare them into asking their doctors if “such and such drug is right for me.” In the year 2019, sales of the statin Lipitor made Pfizer Pharmaceuticals over $2 billion.

When saturated fat became the enemy, the debate over cholesterol as a heart disease indicator gained ground, with the narrative that too much cholesterol clogged arteries and caused heart attacks and strokes.

According to Dr Joseph Mercola in a 16 August 2020 analysis, “Research Confirms Statins Are a Colossal Waste of Money”:

“The food industry shifted away from saturated fat and cholesterol to improve public health, and the medical industry has massively promoted the use of cholesterol-lowering statin drugs for the same reason. Despite that, the rate of heart disease deaths has steadily risen.”

The mastermind behind the low-fat, low-cholesterol connection was American physiologist Ancel Keys, who in 1958 conducted his “Seven Countries Study” to create the saturated fat myth. In the study, he claimed to find a correlation between total cholesterol concentration and heart disease but was later found to be cherry-picking data. It was revealed he excluded data from 16 countries that, when added back in, eliminated all associations between saturated fat and mortality and instead proved those who ate the most saturated animal fat tended to have lower incidences of heart disease.

“ WHEN SATURATED FAT BECAME THE ENEMY, THE DEBATE OVER CHOLESTEROL AS A HEART DISEASE INDICATOR GAINED GROUND, WITH THE NARRATIVE THAT TOO MUCH CHOLESTEROL CLOGGED ARTERIES AND CAUSED HEART ATTACKS AND STROKES. ”

But it was too late. Big Pharma jumped on Keys' study and ran with it. The American Heart Association, Proctor & Gamble Co, and the Center for Science in the Public Interest, all jumped on board and promoted the fallacy for decades, ignoring numerous studies disputing older data and other factors that cause heart disease, such as high blood pressure, stress, inflammation, poor diet, and sedentary lifestyle, and passing over more modern research showing that the more LDL, “bad” cholesterol, is lowered, the greater the risk of heart attacks and strokes.

Mercola notes a number of studies showing statins do not work as promised and that saturated fats are not the evil enemy. “A 2010 meta-analysis which pooled data from 21 studies and included 347,747 adults, found no difference in the risks of heart disease and stroke between people with the lowest and highest intakes of saturated fat.” He cited additional studies and analyses showing the same, including a 2014 meta-analysis of 76 studies by Cambridge University that found no basis for advising low saturated fat consumption to lower cardiac risk.

A 3 August 2020 Science Daily article, “Doubt Cast on Wisdom of Targeting ‘Bad’ Cholesterol to Curb Heart Disease Risk,” cites an analysis that same year published in BMJ Evidence Based Medicine that stated: “Setting targets for ‘bad’ LDL cholesterol levels to ward off heart disease and death in those at risk might seem intuitive, but decades of research have failed to show any consistent benefit for this approach.”

Sometimes the lies are told in stealth mode. For example, during the January 2021 COVID media storm, writes Mercola, “a study published in the journal Atherosclerosis quietly revealed that people taking statin medications had a higher rate of cardiovascular events than those who were not on statins.”

Medical News Today published a June 2016 story by Ana Sandolu, “Statins May Double the Risk of Type 2 Diabetes,” that statins might help heart disease but at the cost of rising rates of the chronic condition. The research, led by Victoria Zigmont, a graduate researcher in public health at Ohio State University in Columbus, appeared in the journal Diabetes Metabolism Research and Reviews.

Trust the Science! (But Should You?)

— BY MARIE D. JONES —

Driven by financial imperative, the research itself has also, inevitably, become biased. He who pays the paper calls the tune.

“The mRNA vaccines are safe and effective!” Tell that to internationally renowned Australian DJ and songwriter Tyson Illingworth, aka TyDi. Tyson says the Australian medical and health system failed him, impeding his right to choose treatment and have a proper doctor-patient relationship after the COVID vaccine seriously injured him.

His moving story is told in a guest essay, “Vaccine Damaged in Australia,” on Robert Malone’s blog.

It all began in October of 2021 when he dutifully received his first COVID vaccine, like so many others in Australia.

“Within days I started to feel severe and unbearable shooting pain and paralysis in my hands and feet. I contacted a globally well-respected spinal surgeon for advice, and his reply scared me like nothing before: ‘This can only be evidence of a catastrophic neurological failure.’”

Tyson was rushed to hospital where he stayed for two weeks.

“I was in disbelief and became depressed because I couldn’t believe the vaccine could do this to me, especially when we were all told it was safe and effective and if there was a reaction it would be minor.”

Tyson then had to deal with a rude and dismissive neurologist who insisted it could not be the vaccine and encouraged him to get the second shot. Doctors at the hospital had no idea what was going on and couldn’t even answer his simple question of whether or not he’d walk “properly” again.

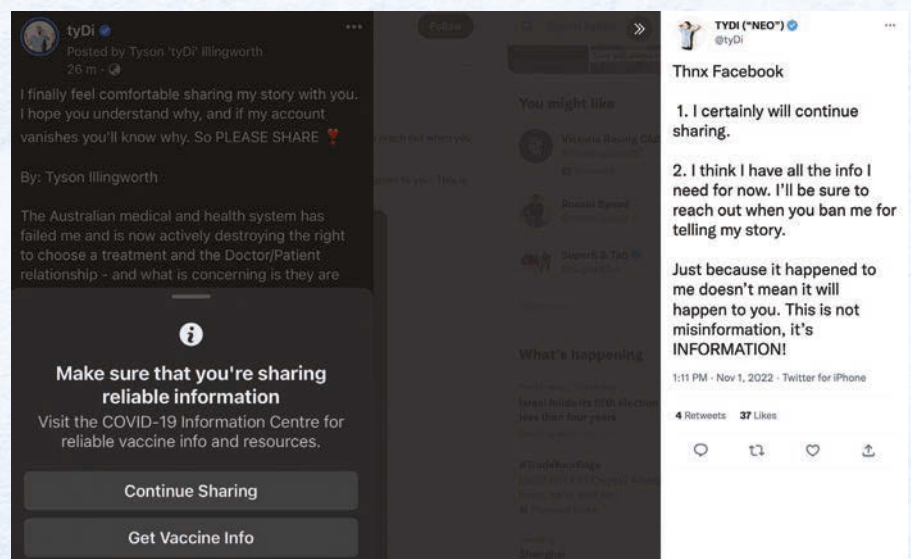

Love will always win.

Tyson trusted the science. He trusted the media. He got his vaccines. He will never be the same. The last line of his essay says it all. “Since when was it a crime to disagree?” Yet, it is not a crime for pharmaceutical companies, doctors, researchers, or the media to spread lies that result in thousands, if not millions, of vaccine injuries and death?

Tyson’s story can be read here <https://rwmalonemd.substack.com/p/vaccine-damaged-in-australia> and also see his Instagram & Twitter, www.instagram.com/tydi; <https://twitter.com/tyDi>.

We are told to “trust the science” by those manipulating, suppressing, and censoring it. We are told that the “science is settled” by those who don’t want their version of it questioned. Yet if science was ever settled, we’d be teaching our children that the Earth is the centre of the solar system.

We trust doctors because we assume they went to medical school, studied hard, and continue researching and keeping abreast of what is best for their patients. But sadly, that is not always the case.

DOCTORS & RESEARCHERS MAKE BANK

A 1 July 2020 New York Times headline said it all: “It Paid Doctors Kickbacks. Now, Novartis Will Pay a $678 Million Settlement.”

company spent more than $100 million on lavish meals, fishing junkets, golf outings, sporting events and speaker fees to influence doctors to prescribe its drugs, US federal prosecutors said. Mostly, the doctors got kickbacks for prescribing drugs to treat high blood pressure.

A 2014 Consumer Reports investigation found that over 500,000 US physicians had industry ties. These are easy to spot. You can see them in your doctor’s office: pens, notepads, clipboards and other items with brand names and logos of various drugs and drug manufacturers. This means they were visited by a drug rep and could be receiving bonuses or kickbacks for referring the drugs being promoted.

Consumer Reports noted: “First, research shows these payments influence doctors in their choice of treatments. Second, our national telephone polls have consistently found that a strong majority of consumers are concerned about these cosy relationships and think that drug makers have too much influence on doctors’ decisions about which drug to prescribe.”

Patients should ask their doctors about these relationships but rarely do.

“A major conflict of interest is at work when a physician has accepted payments from a drug or device-making company whose products he or she then prescribes or implants,” said Marvin Lipman, MD, Consumer Reports senior medical adviser.

We know not all doctors are on the take, but some are, and it often takes a lawsuit to reveal them.

Stanford Medical News reports that “despite scientific evidence to the contrary, a small group of otolaryngologists repeatedly testified, on behalf of the tobacco industry, that heavy smoking did not cause the cancer in cases of dying patients suing for damages.”

Robert Jackler, MD, professor, and chair of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery at Stanford, stated: “I was shocked by the degree to which these physicians were willing to testify, in my opinion in an unscientific way, to deny a dying plaintiff – suffering the aftermath of a lifetime of smoking – a fair trial.” He cited the physicians as “a pool of experts willing to say over and over and over again that smoking didn’t cause cancer.”

It’s impossible to say if these doctors know they are doing wrong or are simply too lazy to research the products they are promoting. It behoves the patient to find out.

SCIENCE & MEDICAL PROPAGANDA

The fields of scientific research and medicine are filled with corruption and propagandists seeking to make money off consumers or sway public opinion to fit their needs.

Predatory journal publishers made the news in March of 2017 as part of a sting operation reported in Scientific American’s “Stat” for their Policy and Ethics section. The sting involved a group of researchers from the University of Warsaw, Poland, who tried to get a fake scholar a seat on the editorial boards of 350 academic publications. With fake scientific degrees and a fake profile on Academia.edu, the fake scholar was offered acceptance by 48 journals. As a result, the journals were labelled “predatory” because they accepted manuscripts without review, printed without editing, and some even required the fake scholar to pay them to be published (pay-to-play).

In the past, money for research studies came from universities, government grants, and other ‘legitimate’ sources and was peer-reviewed for accuracy and objectivity. These days, a handful of giant corporations own the journals and control the flow of information, what gets studied in the first place, and the results.

In his article “The Rise of Junk Science” for The Walrus, Alex Gillis writes: “Increasingly journalists, politicians, and the general public are – sometimes inadvertently, sometimes not – relying on fraudulent and flawed research to guide major decisions.” Gillis points to the “scientifically indefensible” studies that contributed to the 2015 drinking water crisis in Flint, Michigan, in which over 9,000 children were exposed to lead in their water by underplaying the possible causes for concern.

“Fake and flawed studies are so pervasive,” Gillis continued, “that the presumed authority of an expert or researcher in a scholarly journal is no longer what it used to be.”

A March 2010 research article, “Sponsorship of Medical Textbooks by Drug or Device Companies,” published in the Canadian Medical Education Journal, by authors Andreas Lundh and Peter C. Gotzsche, studied whether medical textbooks are sponsored by drug or device companies.

They concluded: “Sponsorship of medical textbooks was not uncommon and may lead to lack of academic freedom. Medical students may be particularly vulnerable to commercial influences, as they have had little or no training in commercial biases and generally believe what they read in textbooks.”

In his essay “Covid-19 – The Final Nail in Coffin of Medical Research,” Scottish doctor, author, and speaker Dr Malcolm Kendrick writes of his disillusionment with medical science. His 2014 book, Doctoring Data: How to Sort Out Medical Advice from Medical Nonsense, was written to help people see through the minefield of medical advice distorted by commercial interests.

“Essentially, medical research has inexorably turned into an industry. A very lucrative industry. Many medical journals now charge thousands of dollars to publish their research. This ensures that it is very difficult for any researcher, not supported by a university, or a pharmaceutical company, to afford to publish anything, unless they are independently wealthy.”

“In addition to all the financial and peer-review pressure, if you dare swim against the approved mainstream views, you will, very often, be ruthlessly attacked.”

He should know. He was attacked for his work critical of the cholesterol-causes-heart-disease hypothesis and for suggesting that Vitamin D fights COVID, which has now been proven true.

If we cannot trust the initial research, and if we cannot trust the scientists or the journal publishers to put forth the highest quality research, how can we trust what our public health officials, doctors, and medical experts tell us? We will “trust the science” when that trust is earned. ▲

“The analysis revealed that people who took statins were more than twice as likely to receive a diabetes diagnosis than those who did not take the medication. Additionally, people who took statins longer than two years were more than three times as likely to develop diabetes.”

Statins continue to be handed out like candy, despite side effects that include muscle stress, pain, fatigue, and weakness, including sharp cramping and tendonitis, which can lead to myositis (inflammation of the muscle) and rhabdomyolysis (severe muscle damage, cell death, kidney failure, possible death). They also raise blood insulin levels. Statins can trigger insulin-related issues and increase the risk of new-onset diabetes for those people taking higher dosages of statins after a heart attack or surgery. They are linked to brain fog, impaired concentration, memory loss, cataracts, dementia, mood changes and mood disturbances, and increase the risk of obesity, ironically which can lead to heart disease and strokes. They also deplete the body’s natural stores of CoQ-10, which is critical for heart health.

5G IS SAFE!

In December 2019, a broad coalition of scientists, researchers, doctors, and advocates signed a National 5G Resolution letter and sent it to US president Donald Trump demanding a moratorium on 5G until further studies on the potential hazards to humans and the environment could be fully undertaken by independent scientists not linked to the telecom industries. The letter referenced published studies that clearly demonstrated harm to human health, bees, the environment, wildlife, trees, and birds from existing technology and showed that the increases needed to accommodate 5G would be even more disastrous.

A petition signed by 26,000 scientists and countless others who opposed 5G was also sent in 2018 to the United Nations, WHO, the European Union, the Council of Europe, and the governments of all nations. The first paragraph stated:

“We the undersigned scientists, doctors, environmental organisations and citizens from (...) countries, urgently call for a halt to the deployment of the 5G (fifth generation) wireless network, including 5G from space satellites. 5G will massively increase exposure to radio frequency (RF) radiation on top of the 2G, 3G and 4G networks for telecommunications already in place. RF radiation has been proven harmful for humans and the environment. The deployment of 5G constitutes an experiment on humanity and the environment that is defined as a crime under international law.”

One of the main concerns is 5G's reliance on the bandwidth of the millimetre wave – MMW, known to penetrate 1 to 2 millimetres into human skin tissue, and that sweat ducts in human skin can act as antennae when in contact with MMWs. The symptoms of such exposure include burning sensations, pain, eye problems, altered heart rate, arrhythmias, and suppressed immune functions. With 5G set to act like an EMF blanket, one can only imagine the symptoms of longer-term exposure.

In “5G Danger: 13 Reasons 5G Wireless Technology Will Be a Catastrophe for Humanity,” Makia Freeman says that 5G dangers include, but are not limited to:

- ★ Damage to sweat ducts from the broadcast frequencies that could alter the human skin itself.
- ★ Dangers from premature aging and injury to the body, the brain, fertility, hearts, and DNA from the way EMFs activate the body's VGCCs – Voltage-gated calcium channels.

- ★ Damage from pulsed wave radiation is far worse than continuous radiation.
- ★ Damage from deep EMF penetration when cell phones are held close to the brain.

- ★ Close proximity to the 5G towers causes negative effects in humans.
- ★ The same frequencies used in 5G are used in riot control and crowd dispersal directed energy weapons.
- ★ The MMW frequencies are both mutagenic (causing DNA damage) and carcinogenic (causing cancers).
- ★ Insects, birds, and children are the most vulnerable to 5G frequencies because of their body size.

National Institute of Environmental Health Science funded the “Ba-shash” study, published in 2017, that showed for each 1-milligram per litre increase in fluoride in pregnant women's urine, there was an associated drop in her child's IQ of four to five points. Canadian researchers found that bottle-fed children in fluoridated communities had an average of nine points lower on IQ tests than those in non-fluoridated communities. An earlier 2012 meta-analysis by the Harvard School of Public Health and China Medical University found evidence that fluoride negatively affected cognitive development in children.

PESTICIDES ARE SAFE!

In 2018, major lawsuits were filed against Roundup, a herbicide (weed killer) made by Monsanto (now owned by Bayer). Dewayne Johnson, a school groundskeeper who developed non-Hodgkin's lymphoma after prolonged exposure on the job, was awarded hundreds of millions in damages. There are now more than 11,000 pending lawsuits against Bayer/Monsanto over the use of Roundup and the key ingredient, glyphosate, a known carcinogen.

On 21 October 2022, The Defender featured a story by Carey Gillam, “50 Years of Secrets: How Chemical Giant Syngenta Hid the Truth About a Dangerous Weedkiller.” Gillam documents how Syngenta manufactured and marketed paraquat, a widely used weed killer. The company's internal documents reveal it was aware their product's long-term use was linked to Parkinson's Disease.

Hundreds of internal corporate records also uncovered conversations between scientists and executives dating back to the 1950s.

“The documents also lay out how Syngenta crafted strategies to defend paraquat and counter independent researchers who were finding more and more evidence that paraquat may cause Parkinson's, including development of an ‘influ-

Attached are an article from the July 18 issue of Science, discussing recent evidence of environmental causes of Parkinson's and portions of an article from Chemical World's Summer 1985 edition focused on the important economic and ecological advantages of concentration tillage using the herbicide, Paraquat. Chevron holds sole U.S. marketing rights for the product which is produced by an Conservation tillage is expected to become the major tillage method in the country.

The article raises concerns that Paraquat may be implicated because:

- Paraquat is chemically very similar to the by-product of synthetic heroin manufacture, MPTP, which produces almost instant Parkinson's, by killing dopaminergic neurons in the brain; and
- Paraquat is among the agricultural chemicals used in the area of Ocala, in which an extraordinarily high correlation of 70% was found between levels of pesticide use and Parkinson's cases. The incidence of the disease in the area was about 3 times the rate in areas where use was low.

The bankruptcy of the asbestos manufacturer, the Monsanto Corporation, has highlighted the especially severe financial risks involved in selling a product which contributes to a chronic disease. Parkinson's can go on for decades.

For the present, we can hope that another chemical or cause will explain the correlation found in the Science study, but I trust that Chevron is watching this closely, and, perhaps doing a little testing, for the sake of its customers and stockholders.

OTHER LIES THEY TOLD US – FLUORIDE IS SAFE!

A DEPRESSING LIE

There is mounting evidence that a low serotonin level is not the main cause of depression as we have been told for decades. But don’t tell that to the makers of antidepressants called SSRIs, selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors, who rake in billions of dollars, convincing millions of people they need to take drugs like Zoloft, Prozac, or Lexapro.

Irving Kirsch – associate director of the Program in Placebo Studies and the Therapeutic Encounter at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and Harvard Medical School and a long-time critic of antidepressants – told Newsweek: “People do get better on the drug – but in the vast majority of cases it’s not because of what’s in the drug. There are other treatments that are at least equally effective, and that don’t carry the risks.”

The small benefits seen in some drug trials are due to emotional numbing, the “flatlined” symptom many on SSRIs report. This numbing effect comes at a steep price, however, as it also prevents you from experiencing emotional highs and does little to counteract the loss of energy, interest and motivation that are so characteristic of depression.

A systematic review published in Molecular Psychiatry on 20 July 2022 concluded: “The main areas of serotonin research provide no consistent evidence of there being an association between serotonin and depression, and no support for the hypothesis that depression is caused by lowered serotonin activity or concentrations. Some evidence was consistent with the possibility that long-term antidepressant use reduces serotonin concentration.”

Using these drugs long-term will likely make you more depressed! Not to mention the long list of side effects including suicidal ideation in children and young adults.

TAKE BACK YOUR HEALTH!

Dr Leland Stillman, author of the new book Dying to Be Free: How America’s Ruling Class Is Killing and Bankrupting Americans, and What To Do About It, warns that “people are being really exploited by the medical system... The [conventional] model is to turn you into a recurring revenue stream, where you’re renting your body from Big Pharma.”

“It’s one of the most disillusioning things, as a practitioner, to realise that so many people are not actually invested in their wellness,” laments Stillman.

The lies, myths, and half-truths only work if we believe and accept them. Instead, we should believe, as Stillman does, that an entirely new healthcare system can and is being built on maintaining health rather than managing disease. ▲

The Chemical Imbalance Big Lie

No Link Between Serotonin & Depression

An Interview with Professor of Psychiatry Joanna Moncrieff

— BY TORSTEN
ENGELBRECHT —

One of the biggest lies believed by the general public is the chemical imbalance theory that depression is caused by lowered serotonin activity or concentrations.

Although mental health professionals know there is no proof of this connection, why was the public fed this narrative for so long, and what is the use of antidepressants?

For answers, investigative journalist Torsten Engelbrecht interviewed Joanna Moncrieff, Professor of Critical and Social Psychiatry at University College London.

This interview, abridged for space, first appeared on the German website Transition News.

TORSTEN ENGELBRECHT (TE): Dear Joanna. Your recent study found that the prevailing hypothesis that depression is caused by decreased serotonin activity, or concentration, is baseless. You write that it “has caused shock waves among the general public.” Why?

JOANNA MONCRIEFF (JM): People believed there was scientific evidence demonstrating a link between serotonin and depression. And people have believed that because in the 1990s, the pharmaceutical industry launched a very widespread, heavily funded promotion campaign to persuade people that depression was due to a chemical imbalance and specifically a lack of serotonin, which could be rectified by taking an antidepressant.

...IN THE 1990S, THE PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY LAUNCHED A VERY WIDESPREAD, HEAVILY FUNDED PROMOTION CAMPAIGN TO PERSUADE PEOPLE THAT DEPRESSION WAS DUE TO A CHEMICAL IMBALANCE AND SPECIFICALLY A LACK OF SEROTONIN, WHICH COULD BE RECTIFIED BY TAKING AN ANTIDEPRESSANT.

That was a huge marketing campaign aimed at doctors but also at the general public via the internet. And in countries that have direct-to-consumer advertising, it was advertised to consumers on television and radio and other media. It was very successful.

That campaign was launched to counteract people’s underlying common sense feeling that taking a drug for an emotional problem was probably not a good idea.

The campaign successfully reversed that idea and replaced it by this belief that depression is a chemical problem, which turns out not to be the case. It turns out there is no evidence to support that.

TE: Your findings are not new. Psy-

JOANNA MONCRIEFF is a Professor of Critical and Social Psychiatry at University College London, and works as a consultant psychiatrist in the NHS. She researches and writes about the over-use and misrepresentation of psychiatric drugs and about the history, politics and philosophy of psychiatry more generally. She is currently leading UK government-funded research on reducing and discontinuing antipsychotic drug treatment (the RADAR study), and collaborating on a study to support antidepressant discontinuation. In the 1990s she co-founded the Critical Psychiatry Network to link up with other, like-minded psychiatrists. She is author of numerous papers and her books include A Straight Talking Introduction to Psychiatric Drugs (second edition), published in September 2020 by PCCS Books, as well as The Bitterest Pills: The Troubling Story of Antipsychotic Drugs (2013) and The Myth of the Chemical Cure (2009).

chiatrists such as David Healy and Peter Breggin expressed this view years ago. So why hasn't this come to the surface?

JM: Leading psychiatrists have known for a long time there was no evidence to support the serotonin theory of depression. But no one informed the general public of that. No leading psychiatrists have taken it on board to let the public know.

People like David Healy and myself and some others have written about this. The leaders of the psychiatric profession, we have to conclude, have been happy to allow the general public to continue with this misperception that a link between serotonin and depression had been established.

TE: Ronald W. Pies, professor emeritus of psychiatry, counters your view when he said, "historically, psychiatrists have never explained clinical depression solely in terms of reduced serotonin or any specific neurotransmitter," and as with selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs) such as Prozac, "many drugs in clinical medicine work through unknown or multiple mechanisms. And this does not affect their safety, efficacy or approval for medical use." Doesn't this contradict your views?

JM: There are a couple of points you've made. First, it is true that psychiatrists have always seen depression as a bio-psycho-social phenomenon where the biological is only a part of it.

But there is a problem. If you suggest there is a specific abnormality in the brain that can be targeted by a drug, then obviously it makes sense to take that drug. Especially if you suggest that other things, such as what's going on in people's lives, are downgraded to second place and only focus on a problem in the brain.

This approach is misleading because to tell people an abnormality of serotonin had been found has no scientific basis because in fact it hadn't been found.

You are also correct that many psychiatrists have recently been saying it doesn't matter how antidepressants work. These psychiatrists haven't necessarily been saying the drugs work by rectifying an underlying chemical imbalance.

There are two points I'd like to say to that. First of all, it really does matter how antidepressants work.

And secondly, even if psychiatrists haven't been promoting the idea of the chemical imbalance because it has been so widely absorbed and because so many people believe it is established, it's not good enough to just not promote it.

You actually need to tell people that it is not supported, there is no evidence for it.

TE: The most important evidence would be a placebo-controlled study showing that taking an antidepressant would be much better than doing nothing. In this context you say that studies show that antidepressants are only "marginally better than a placebo [or inaction] at reducing depression scores over a few weeks. However, the difference is so small that it is not clear it is even noticeable, and there's evidence that it may be explained by artefacts of the design of the studies rather than the effects of the drugs.” I’d like to quote Pies again who counters that “there’s ample evidence from placebo-controlled studies that serotonergic antidepressants are safe and effective in the treatment of acute major depressive episodes.”

JM: This is really important. So many people have said in response to our paper that antidepressants work, that they’ve been shown to have important and substantial benefits.

I don’t think that is true. There have been many large analyses of antidepressant placebo-controlled studies that show the difference between the placebo and the antidepressant is very small. There’s no debate about that.

There’s been an extensive study published recently in the journal BMJ. What it shows is the difference between the antidepressant and the placebo on the depression rating scale score is less than two points on a 52-point scale.

No one thinks that difference is clinically significant. And the other thing is that these trials are all short-term. As you mentioned, there are lots of other methodological reasons that actually might inflate these differences.

So that small difference may not even be a real difference. The issue is that if you compare antidepressants with placebos in trials, there is a little bit of difference. The question is what is that difference due to, and I think there are two possible explanations.

One is that in these trials, people often know whether they’re taking the active drug or the placebo because they can tell they’re getting a few side effects. They feel a little bit different. So the people on the active drug in these studies may well be getting what we could call an “amplified placebo effect.”

That could explain the difference between the placebo and the drug.

The other possible explanation is that antidepressants have this emotional numbing effect. So that could temporarily reduce the intensity of someone’s underlying sadness and feelings of depression, as well as reduce the intensity of any positive feelings they have, like happiness or joy.

TE: If science is clear there’s no solid study showing that taking an antidepressant is better than doing nothing or taking a placebo, why are people such as Pies still defending the official line?

JM: Psychiatrists appear to be very reluctant to overly criticise antidepressant use. I think that’s because the psychiatric profession and much of society following their lead have become convinced depression is a medical problem that can be addressed with a medical solution. Therefore, they feel threatened by anything that fundamentally questions that narrative.

TE: How much influence does the pharmaceutical industry have on psychiatry?

JM: The pharmaceutical industry has been very influential on the public and the psychiatric profession. We also need to remember that the psychiatric profession came up with this chemical imbalance idea before the pharmaceutical industry got involved. The theory that depression is related to low serotonin goes back to the 1960s and was proposed by a British psychiatrist.

The pharmaceutical industry really gets into promoting this idea of the chemical imbalance in the 1990s. So they certainly reinforce the idea among the profession of psychiatry but what they really achieve is persuading the public this is a credible and established theory.

TE: Is there any major study not being financed by the pharmaceutical industry or any independent science?

JM: The pharmaceutical industry massively influences research on antidepressants because they conduct the vast majority of studies on antidepressants.

We know that pharmaceutical industry studies often “inflate” the effects of the drug that the pharmaceutical company is promoting. So if the studies don’t show a positive finding for the company’s drug, they are not published, they are “buried.”

Even in studies that get to publication, they’ve often been tweaked or “massaged,” positive outcomes are highlighted more than they should be.

TE: You also state that “it is not self-evident that manipulating the brain with drugs is the most useful level at which to deal with emotions. This may be something akin to soldering the hard drive to fix a problem with the software.”

It sounds as if you are criticising the mechanical way of thinking of today’s times that dominates the modern world and to which the French 17th-century philosopher René Descartes contributed significantly.

He considered the body of living beings as a kind of machine. Aren’t events in the body too complex to be compared to a computer hard disc that you repair by soldering something? And where does that leave room for dealing with emotions or feelings?

JM: We need our brain, and our body as well, to think, to feel, to communicate, to do everything that we do. But that doesn’t mean we can explain the nature of our thoughts and feelings by looking inside the brain.

It’s the wrong level at which to understand human behaviour, human thoughts, and human feelings, in my view and in the view of many other people who criticise this reductionist view that you can reduce depression or happiness or love or someone’s political views, someone’s taste of books or music, to events in the brain.

Many philosophers have written about how this view is nonsensical. Human attributes like love and appreciation of music need to be understood in the context of the human world.

They make no sense if you try and talk about them in terms of nerves and neurological events and activity.

TE: Even experts such as Pies concede “there is legitimate debate over the efficacy of long-term antidepressant use,” while you not only say that it is “impossible to say that taking antidepressant or SSRIs is worthwhile,” but also that “it is not clear that these drugs do more good than harm.” What harm can they do?

JM: This is a really important point. If we have no evidence that antidepressants are working by reversing an underlying abnormality – and we know, and no one denies it, these are drugs that work on the brain – we have to conclude that these drugs are actually changing the normal state of the brain.

They are modifying it, they are altering our normal brain state, our normal brain chemistry. And if you take a substance that alters your normal brain chemistry every day for weeks and months and years, you may do yourself some harm.

We know that because we know that people who drink alcohol a lot every day cause themselves harm, and people who take other recreational drugs that also change brain chemistry can do themselves harm.

And we know that taking antidepressants in the long term can cause a number of harms that relate to the way they modify the brain.

For example, we know now that people become physically dependent on antidepressants and therefore when they try and stop them, they can experience quite severe and debilitating and prolonged withdrawal symptoms.

We also know that antidepressants cause sexual dysfunction. They do that even in the short term. And it’s a very common side effect, very well recognised. It’s becoming increasingly clear that in some people the sexual side effects persist when people stop taking the antidepressant. That implies the antidepressant has changed the brain in some way, in some harmful way.

I’m not saying that this is necessarily a permanent state. We haven’t recognised this effect for long enough, really to know whether it is persistent or permanent or whether it might go away with time. But it’s definitely something that seems to happen to some people who have been using these drugs for long periods.

TE: Antidepressants have also been linked by experts such as Peter Breggin to violent acts and even homicides. What do you think about that?

JM: The evidence suggests that antidepressants can cause younger people to engage in suicidal behaviour more often than people on a placebo. This is evidence from randomised controlled trials.

There is also a higher risk of aggression in young people taking antidepressants compared to young people in these studies who are taking a placebo. The risk in these studies is very small and it’s only in younger people.

The risk is small partly because these studies try to select people with no pre-existing risk factors or a minimum number of pre-existing risk factors.

So, in real life, the risk might actually be a bit higher. I think this risk is related to the fact that antidepressants seem to have an agitating effect in younger people. And we don’t know why this happens more in young people than older people, but it does seem to.

TE: You also say that “only a minority of medical drugs target the ultimate underlying cause of a disease.” What would treatment for mental illnesses like depression look like that addresses these “underlying causes of a disease”?

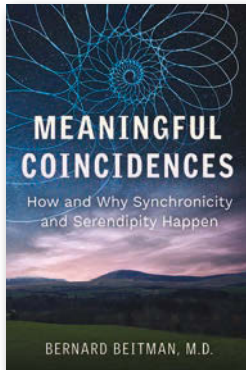

JM: Medical drugs may not treat the underlying cause of the disease. Most of them don’t, but they do target the underlying pathways, underlying biological pathways that produce symptoms. So even painkillers, which are clearly only symptomatic treatment, target the underlying neurological mechanisms that produce pain.

Psychiatric drugs work differently. They’re not targeting any underlying processes. They are producing alterations to normal mental states, which are then superimposed onto whatever emotional problem the person is experiencing.

At the moment we don’t know and we have not identified any underlying neurological processes for any sort of mental disorder that could be targeted by a biological treatment. I'm not sure that we will be able to do it because I think the view of mental disorders is inappropriately reductionist.

I think that is the view of trying to find the problem in the brain rather than looking at the problem at the level of the human being and the human being in her world.

TE: What does this mean for the use of drugs?

JM: If people are feeling depressed and they take a drug, I think you need to see it in the same way as taking alcohol. It temporarily changes your mental state while taking it, and then you stop taking it. And the mental state comes back.

If you've been taking the drug for a long time, you possibly get some other complications as well. In general, I think that drugs should be avoided and particularly avoided over the long term.

The most important thing for me is to give people information so they can make up their own minds about the use of drugs.

We need an approach that starts to see mental health problems differently. Instead of seeing them as diagnoses or disorders that are the same in everyone who has them, we see people as individuals who have their individual set of problems. And every person with depression is responding to a different set of circumstances.

It's understanding why someone is depressed and the circumstances that have made them depressed. That is the most important thing in helping someone. Each person with depression needs a different solution, depending on what has made them depressed.

People can do some sensible things to improve emotional and mental resilience. One of those is definitely exercise which has very good effects on mood and on reducing anxiety. The same holds for eating a well balanced diet and just looking after yourself. Ensuring you have enough sleep is another crucial factor for general mental well-being.

TE: What should affected people do? Are there many therapists who do not drive a drug-fixated approach?

JM: Most people are prescribed antidepressants by their general practitioner rather than by a psychiatrist. I know that general practitioners are trying to offer people alternatives.

We need a combination of a public information campaign to inform people this idea of the chemical imbalance was wrong. And we need to educate doctors, we need to encourage and support doctors to offer patients alternatives to medication such as subscriptions for the local gym.

In the UK, we have a certain amount of "social prescribing" whereby doctors give people gym prescriptions or recommend other social activities instead of prescribing them medication. We need to support and promote that.

TE: Let's look into the future: Are you confident this is going to change?

JM: Oh, gosh! I think there are many people now, especially when I speak to people in the USA, who are utterly convinced that mental health problems are problems in the brain and that we just need to treat the brain and we need to find the right drug or the right sort of biological intervention. That attitude has taken very deep root in the public consciousness in the last few decades. So I don't see that changing overnight. On the other hand, there are also significant numbers of people starting to question that idea. I think and I hope that those numbers increase after the publication of our paper and due to debates like the one we are having now and that you've had with other psychiatrists, other critical psychiatrists and critical voices in the mental health field.

The US-Nazi Connection Since World War II

From Inspiring the Third Reich to Supporting the Neo-Nazis of Ukraine

— BY TIMOTHY ALEXANDER
GUZMAN —

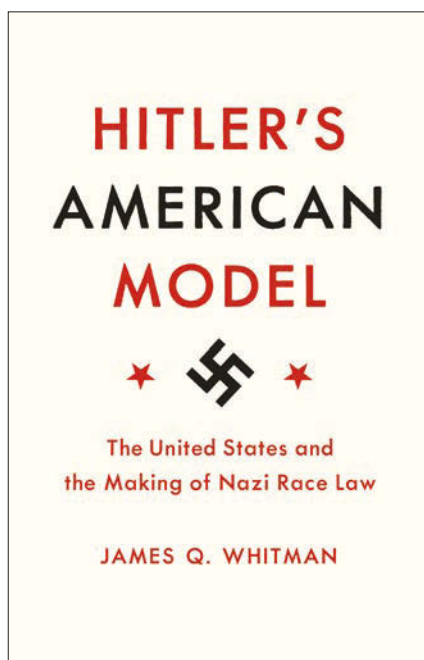

The mafia in Washington, London, Brussels and Tel Aviv would do anything to keep their “Unipolar World Order” project in place. In fact, they are desperate to hold on to whatever remaining powers they have left, even if it means collaborating with their worst enemies.

There is a well-known ancient proverb, “The enemy of my enemy is my friend,” that rings true today, especially since Washington, the CIA, the Military-Industrial Complex, along with Mossad and NATO, have supported well-known terrorists, including the Islamic State (ISIS), Al Qaeda, and other groups to overthrow governments they disapprove, especially in the Middle East.

However, their support of terrorists who were enemies at one time or another did not start with regime change wars against Syria or Libya. The idea of supporting enemies began during and after World War II when the US government recruited German and Ukrainian Nazis to counter their new enemy, the Soviet Union.

What a strange turn of events. The Soviets, who fought the Nazis with their American and European allies during the war, were now seen as the new threat.

Back then, Washington and the rest of their mafia cohorts used the Nazis just as today they have done with jihadi terrorists – in wars for world domination, no matter what the cost in the long term.

Who were these Nazis, and why was Washington interested in recruiting them in the first place? The Nazis were heavily involved in several important scientific and technological disciplines. Naturally, this interested the US government, which later recruited Nazis to produce all sorts of weapons and psychological operations for its own military, but we will get into further details shortly.

The Nazis followed a far-right fascist authoritarian ideology along ultranationalist lines that rejected anarchy, communism, democracy, republicanism, socialism and other forms of government seen as threats to its rising power. As insane as this sounds, the Nazis applied scientific racism – eugenics – to manipulate human gene pools by separating groups of people between ‘inferior’ and ‘superior’. There is also the element of antisemitism prevalent within the Third Reich. Nazism led to genocide, torture, forced sterilisations, imprisonment of all opposition, deportations and other atrocities against those without the right racial qualities or political views demanded by their movement.

Looking back into history, the roots of fascism emerged in Europe during the time of Louis-Napoléon Bonaparte, ‘aka’ Napoleon III, who ruled France with an iron fist from 1848 to 1852, and which reflected elements of a fascist/Nazi state.

INSPIRED BY AMERICA

Adolf Hitler, Germany’s appointed Chancellor, imposed fascist policies in his country when he came to power on 30 January 1933. Hitler’s allies – the Axis Alliance of Benito Mussolini of Italy and Hirohito of Imperial Japan – instituted similar policies.

What inspired Nazi ideology and certain policies? It’s a known fact that Adolf Hitler admired American methods of dealing with specific groups, from the Jim Crow laws against African Americans to the indigenous populations sent to prison camps during the American Indian wars.

John Toland’s Adolf Hitler: The Definitive Biography explains that “Hitler’s concept of concentration camps as well as the practicality of genocide owed much, so he claimed, to his studies of English and United States history.”

NC Prohibits Any Marriage Between Races

This Is The Law

BY ROBERT E. LEE

For The N. C. Bar Association Have recent "civil rights" decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court rendered valid marriages in North Carolina between Negro and white persons?

No. The constitutionality of state statutes prohibiting the intermarriage of persons of different races must be proved that such ancestor was of absolutely pure Negro blood. This might be extraordinarily difficult.

What Are the legal consequences of marriage performed in North Carolina between a Negro and a white person? The purported marriage is ► Newspaper clippings of stories about marriage violations when miscegenation was illegal in many US states. The laws inspired the Nazis to frame similar in Germany to deal with 'undesirables'.

"He admired the camps for Boer prisoners in South Africa and for the Indians in the wild west; and often praised to his inner circle the efficiency of America's extermination – by starvation and uneven combat – of the red savages who could not be tamed by captivity."¹

Where did the idea of a 'concentration camp' come from? US President and Democrat Andrew Jackson introduced "emigration depots" as part of his Indian Removal Act of 1830 when tens of thousands of indigenous peoples were forced into what were called "prison camps." This included Seminoles, Cherokee, Choctaw, Muscogee, and other tribal nations, mainly in the southern part of the United States including Alabama and Tennessee.

Another US model that influenced Nazi Germany was the Jim Crow Laws. James Q. Whitman, a legal scholar and author of Hitler's American Model: The United States and the Making of Nazi Race Law, writes in the Introduction:

In the opening minutes, Justice Minister Gurtner [Reich Minister of Justice in Adolf Hitler's first Cabinet] presented a memo on American race law, which had been carefully prepared by officials of the ministry for purposes of the gathering; and the participants returned repeatedly to the American models of racist legislation in the course of their discussions. It is particularly startling to discover that the most radical Nazis present were the most ardent champions of the lessons that American approaches held for Germany. Not, as we shall see, in this transcript the only record of Nazi engagement with American race law. In the late 1920's and early 1930's many Nazis, not least Hitler himself, took a serious interest in the racist legislation of the United States. Indeed in Mein Kampf Hitler praised America as nothing less than "the one state" that had made progress toward the creation of a healthy racist order of the kind the Nuremberg Laws were intended to establish.

My purpose is to chronicle this neglected history of Nazi efforts to mine American race law for inspiration during the making of the Nuremberg Laws, and to ask what it tells us about Nazi Germany, about the modern history of racism, and especially about America.²

US-inspired race laws were imposed on German society with the establishment of the Nuremberg Laws that passed on 15 September 1935. The Nazis saw US race laws as an already functioning modern policy that could be applied in Germany to ethnic groups such as the Jews, who eventually became non-citizens. Native Americans, Filipinos, African Americans, and others were also considered non-citizens, even if they lived in the US or its colonised territories. The Nazis were also greatly interested in another aspect of the US legal system of that time: anti-miscegenation laws that prohibited interracial marriages in about 30 US states, in which those who broke the law received severe criminal punishment.

OPERATION PAPERCLIP

Rumours of nuclear war are more prevalent today since Russia's invasion of Ukraine. Ukraine's actor, oh, excuse me, I mean President, Volodymyr Zelensky, has called for "preventive strikes" to deter Russia from using nuclear weapons, although he backtracked the claims shortly afterwards.

Speaking of nuclear weapons, do you know who originally proposed placing nuclear bombs on ballistic missiles? Nazi rocket scientists during World War II first came up with the idea (many of whom, after the war, were hired by the US government). The original program, called Uranprojekt or "Uranium Project," sought to develop nuclear technology for weapons and reactors.

In the last years of World War II, US intelligence agencies and its military-industrial complex secretly transferred more than 1,600 Nazi scientists and their families from Germany to the US. These were experts in various fields such as rocket science, aerodynamics, chemical weapons, and medicine. It was called Operation Paperclip.

Some Nazis working for the US military prepared intelligence briefs (psyops) to create fear and panic that the Soviets would take over the world.

What the US government feared most was that the Soviet Union, under Operation Osoaviakhim, had recruited more than 2,500 former Nazi scientists and engineers from out of the Soviet occupation zone of Germany (SBZ) and the Soviet sector of Berlin. The fear was that the Soviets were one step ahead of the US government in weapons development and other areas.

An important historical fact about Operation Paperclip was its recruitment of Wernher von Braun, ing rocket technology and is considered the pioneer of rocket and space technology in the US. He was the chief architect of the Saturn V super heavy-lift launch vehicle that allegedly helped launch the Apollo spacecraft to the Moon.

Nazi scientists also helped the US government and the CIA develop chemical and biological weapons programs, including the use of sarin gas, VX (nerve agent) and, of course, the most used biological weapon during the Vietnam War, Agent Orange.

In other words, the US government hired Nazi scientists for their expertise in creating weapons of mass destruction that have since inflicted massive damage on various populations worldwide. During the Vietnam War, the US military unleashed Agent Orange on the Vietnamese population causing birth defects in more than three million people and other health related problems to this day.

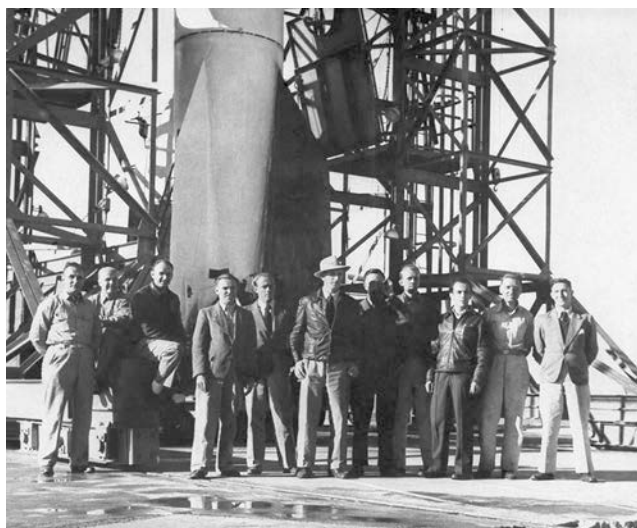

Nazi scientists were indeed evil geniuses in developing advanced weapons of war, something that greatly interested the US military and its intelligence community. That was and still is a scary thought.

AMERICA'S FRANKENSTEIN: THE NEO-NAZIS OF UKRAINE

We know from the valuable lessons of history that the US government and the CIA supported and trained Ukrainian-aligned Nazis since 1946. The CIA organised "Stay Behind" operations with the OUN-B (Organisation of Ukrainian Nationalists) in Eastern Europe and other areas to assist Ukrainian nationalists who were sent to destabilise Soviet Ukraine with covert operations such as using commandos to assassinate Soviet officials, sabotage infrastructure, and commit acts of terrorism.

History reveals that the US government, through its CIA operatives, known by his full name Wernher Magnus Maximilian Freiherr von Braun, a member of the Nazi Party and the Allgemeine SS or the "General SS," a major branch of Nazi Germany's paramilitary forces. Von Braun was also the head of develop-supported Ukrainian war criminal and Nazi collaborator Stepan Bandera to advance the Ukrainian underground movement and destabilise Soviet Ukraine. The CIA, through their Office of Policy Coordination (OPC) and Office of Special Operations (OSO), planned covert operations with the OUN-B and provided support to the anti-Soviet Ukraine Insurgent Army (UPA) for psychological warfare in the Soviet sphere.

The historical account of the CIA's association with Ukrainian nationalists who collaborated with the Nazis

during the Cold War came to light in declassified documents. Kevin C Ruffner in Cold War Allies: The Origins of CIA's Relationship with Ukrainian Nationalists, details how the “CIA reestablished and expanded its contacts with the Ukrainians and others for covert action against the Communists and as wartime assets to be used behind Red Army lines as guerrillas, saboteurs, and resistance leaders.”³ The historical account further states, “The sometimes brutal war record of many emigre groups became blurred as they became more critical to the CIA.”

Fast forward to November 2013 when there were large-scale protests known as the Euro-maidan against the policies of Ukrainian President Victor Yanukovich, who decided for closer ties with Russia and the Eurasian Economic Union instead of proceeding with developing a political and economic relationship with the European Union when he rejected their free-trade agreement. Then, in February 2014, what is known as the Maidan Revolution took place, which saw violent clashes between protesters and government security forces in Ukraine's capital Kyiv. This led to a coup against the democratically elected President Yanukovich. Soon after, the Russo-Ukrainian war began, and the neo-Nazi-inspired Azov Battalion was born, established to resist anything Russian.

On 22 January 2022, Yahoo News, part of mainstream media, published an article ‘CIA-trained Ukrainian paramilitaries may take central role if Russia invades’ that admitted the CIA had secretly trained Ukrainian forces since 2015:

While the covert program, run by paramilitaries working for the CIA's Ground Branch – now officially known as Ground Department – was established by the Obama administration after Russia's invasion and annexation of Crimea in 2014, and expanded under the Trump administration, the Biden administration has further augmented it, said a former senior intelligence official in touch with colleagues in government.⁴

According to Yahoo News, an unnamed former senior intelligence official said, “If the Russians invade, those [graduates of the CIA programs] are going to be your militia, your insurgent leaders,” and that “we’ve been training these guys now for eight years. They’re really good fighters. That’s where the agency’s program could have a serious impact.” One wonders how many were, in fact, radicalised neo-Nazis.

In 2018, Reuters published a commentary by Josh Cohen, ‘Ukraine’s neo-Nazi problem’, that discussed Ukraine’s problem of neo-Nazis filling the ranks of its “National Militia.” According to Cohen, “a January 28 demonstration, in Kiev, by 600 members of the so-called ‘National Militia’, a newly-formed ultranationalist group that vows ‘to use force to establish order’, illustrates this threat.”⁵ Cohen added that the National Militia recruited members from the neo-Nazi-affiliated Azov Battalion (Regiment):

Many of the National Militia’s members come from the Azov movement, one of the 30-odd privately-funded “volunteer battalions” that, in the early days of the war, helped the regular army to defend Ukrainian territory against Russia’s separatist proxies. Although Azov uses Nazi-era symbolism and recruits neo-Nazis into its ranks, a recent article in For- ign Affairs downplayed any risks the group might pose, pointing out that, like other volunteer militias, Azov has been “reined in” through its integration into Ukraine’s armed forces. While it’s true that private militias no longer rule the battlefield, it’s the home front that Kiev needs to worry about now.

Although Cohen’s article effectively exposes Ukraine’s neo-Nazi ‘problem’, he also follows the Western establishment and mainstream media narrative when he says, “the Kremlin’s claims that Ukraine is a hornets’ nest of fascists are false: far-right parties performed poorly in Ukraine’s last parliamentary elections, and Ukrainians reacted with alarm to the National Militia’s demonstration in Kiev.” Cohen’s statement is false. In fact, it contradicts what he wrote at the beginning of his article that many of the “National Militia’s members come from the Azov movement” but not to worry because “Azov has been ‘reined in’ through its integration into Ukraine’s armed forces” – at least according to Cohen who sourced his misinformation from Foreign Affairs magazine,⁶ a publication of the Council of Foreign Relations, a favourite of the US political establishment.

War on Terror Lies

The Nexus of Intelligence Agencies & Terror Networks

— BY DR T.J. COLES —

In the book Devil's Game, Robert Dreyfuss documents how the US and Britain have created, organised, and enabled terrorist networks, most of them purporting to be Islamic, for over a century. The aims are to crush domestic dissidents, use the groups as proxies to fight enemies, and outrage Western audiences with terrorism to get them to support wars for oil in the Middle East.

Today, we may ask: Whatever happened to the 'war on terror', which seems to have disappeared when COVID came along? We are left with a legacy of 'war on terror' legislation.

MANUFACTURING TERRORISM

A few years ago, former FBI agent Michael German said that the agency was "manufacturing terrorism cases" to justify its existence. The FBI does this, says German, by taking vulnerable Arab Americans and other Americans from ethnic and religious minorities, and guiding them via agents (called handlers) to commit terrorism. Often, just before the given act of terror occurs, the FBI steps in to save the day.¹ Journalist and author Trevor Aaronson says:

more than 150 people... caught in sting operations never had the means and, in some cases, never had the idea for the terrorism plot... [I]t was the FBI that provided them with everything – the bomb, the

Bush declares all-out war on the havens of terrorism transportation, everything they needed to move forward in a terrorism plot that on their own, they never would have been able to do. And certainly evidence suggests that in most of these cases, they never had any specific connections to terrorism.²

In 2011, the University of California-Berkeley's Investigative Reporting Program teamed up with Mother Jones magazine to report on criminal prosecution statistics involving terrorism and other charges. They found that by that year, of the 508 defendants brought to court by the FBI, 48% were targeted by informants, 31% were arrested in sting operations and 10% were provoked by a handler/informant. Amazingly, 41% were not connected to a terrorist group, raising questions about how and why they came to allegedly want to commit terrorism. Only 21% were linked to 'al-Qaeda'. Twenty-nine per cent were linked to other Islamic groups, and 9% to non-Islamic groups.³

Likewise, in the UK, by 2013, 18% of British terrorism cases were connected to the group al-Muhajiroun (the Emigrants), according to the Henry Jackson Society (HJS). The HJS doesn't bother reporting that al-Muhajiroun's co-founder, Omar Bakri, was an MI5 informant.⁴ Bakri's partner was Anjem Choudary. By August 2016, 850 Britons were fighting for the Islamic State in Libya, Syria and elsewhere. Commander Dean Haydon, head of the Metropolitan Police's counterterrorism unit, confirmed to the media that Choudary had recruited Britons for the Islamic State. Choudary, who was jailed, was connected to 500 of the 850 jihadis.⁵

For years, the Metropolitan Police were prevented from acting against Choudary by MI5. A source told the Telegraph: "While the police might have had lots of evidence they were pulled back by the security service because he [Choudary] was one of the people they were monitoring. It was very frustrating and did cause some tension but we were told we had to consider the bigger picture." The 'bigger picture' was that the secret services wanted to create a jihadi network in Libya and Syria to overthrow the regimes of Muammar Qadhafi and Bashar al-Assad, respectively, as they had in Afghanistan and Pakistan to fight the Soviets beginning 1978.⁶

Back in 2002 after the 9/11 attacks, the George W. Bush administration's Defense Science Board recommended establishing a $100m per year sub-agency called the Proactive Pre-emptive Operations Group (P2OG).⁷ Under the heading "Aggressive Proactive, Preemptive Operations," the report describes influence warfare and information operations ('IW/IO'), "Covert action," "Cover & Deception," psychological operations ('PSYOPS') and the use of special operations forces ('SOF'). The doctrine "[i]mproves information collection by stimulating reactions," i.e., provoking terrorists and setting traps, as the FBI has done for decades. It recommends: "Vest responsibility and accountability for the P2OG to a 'Special Operations Executive' in the NSC [National Security Council]."⁸

North Africa specialist and hostage negotiator Professor Jeremy Keenan writes:

The first P2OG operation was in the Algerian Sahara in 2003, when Algeria's security and intelligence service, the Département du Renseignement et de la Sécurité (DRS), now work-

Pete Weatherly, QC, for several other families, said that the applications should not cover contact between counterterrorism police and Abedi and any inquiries that may have been made into their associates, adding that they had already seen "two pieces of highly relevant intelligence". Sir John said there was an "arguable case" for a breach of the duty of the state to avoid the "real and immediate threat to life". His ruling means that the ing with the Pentagon and US intelligence services, kidnapped and took hostage 32 European tourists. Although the operation was managed by a DRS agent, the Bush administration was able to proclaim that the kidnap had been carried out by "Bin Laden's man in the Sahara," justifying the US's launch in 2004 of a second front or Sahara-Sahel front in the GWOT [global 'war on terror'].⁹

CASE STUDY

In May 2017, 22 people were reportedly murdered when one, Salman Abedi, allegedly detonated a suicide bomb in the foyer of the Manchester Arena as people were leaving a pop concert. Abedi's father, Ramadan, was a paid MI6 operative who was allowed to live in the UK under successive governments, including under then-Home Secretary Theresa May, who was PM when the bombing occurred. He left the UK in 2011, the same year that MI6 had helped organise a terrorist takeover of Libya.

In 1994, after fighting in Afghanistan, one Abd al-Baset Azzouz left Libya, his home country, to live in London, where the British government protected him. In 1995, MI6 learned of a coup plot against Libya's leader, Muammar Qadhafi. The plot appears to have been readied for February 1996 and devised by secular colonels within Qadhafi's military circle.¹⁰ A leaked MI6 report says: "It would begin with attacks on a number of military and security installations including the military installation at Tarhuna. There would also be orchestrated civil unrest in Benghazi, Misratah and Tripoli." The report notes that "[c]oup plotters are not associated with Islamic fundamentalists," like Azzouz, "who were fermenting unrest in Benghazi." However, the coup plotters "had had some limited contact with the fundamentalists, whom [MI6 informant 'Tunworth'] described as a mix of Libya veterans who served in Afghanistan," i.e., old CIA-MI6 contacts, "and Libyan students."¹¹

There were two coup plots: a secular one led by Qadhafi's inner circle and an Islamic one led by extremists in Benghazi. The MI6 report on the 1996 coup said that the plotters wanted to see Libya decentralised and federally run.

Richard Bartlett and David Watson were MI6 agents involved in the operations. Watson worked with the Libya contact, 'Tunworth', who provided information from within the Libyan Islamic Fighting Group (LIFG), the organisation referred to in the MI6 report as the Benghazi-based extremist group. Manchester bomber Abedi's father was associated with the LIFG. In 1995, MI6 chose to work with the extremists in Benghazi, who had close connections with Osama bin Laden through their leaders, Abu Abdullah al-Sadiq (a.k.a. Belhaj) and Anas al-Liby.¹² The British government protected al-Liby, who is described by the US Congress as "the builder of al-Qaeda's network in Libya."¹³ In 1992, al-Liby trained with a CIA operative, Ali Mohamed, in Osama bin Laden's house in Hyatabad, Pakistan.¹⁴ In 1996, MI6 financed the anti-Qadhafi LIFG to the tune of £100,000.

In 2013, Salman Abedi – the 2017 Manchester bomber – travelled to Libya and met the Islamic State-linked Katibat al-Battar al-Libi. The KBL was indirectly getting money from MI5 via informants. It quickly emerged that Abedi was Ramadan's son. It later transpired that British police did not believe he acted alone;¹⁵ America's FBI had warned the UK about Abedi;¹⁶ that Abedi had been on a MI5 watch list as he travelled from Manchester to Libya and back;¹⁷ and that police very quickly dropped investigations into co-conspirators.¹⁸

SOCIAL CONTROL

After 9/11, the Bush administration imposed upon Americans the Patriot Act 2001. The Act criminalises providing “material support” to terrorists, including “expert advice or assistance.” Section 215 made it easier for agencies (notably the FBI) to gather internet users’ metadata in a boon to the hi-tech industry which won more contracts. Patriot made it easier for the FBI to break into suspects’ homes and copy their computer files and take DNA samples. Section 411 allows the government to expel or refuse entry to non-citizens on the grounds of their use of prominence “to endorse or espouse terrorist activity” or persuade others to do so. Dr Tariq Ramadan’s teaching visa was revoked under the Act, despite him being a well-known moderate. Presumably, the aim was to silence other prominent Muslims living in America from criticising the “war on terror.”¹⁹

Britain’s Labour government (1997-2010) was one of the worst offenders when it came to using counterterror legislation to control society.²⁰ The Terrorism Act 2000 made it an offence to supply material to individuals accused of property damage. When then-82-year-old German-Jewish Labour supporter and later National Executive Committee-member, Walter Wolfgang, heckled the Foreign Secretary Jack Straw at the party conference in Brighton (2005), Wolfgang was forcibly removed by security guards and prevented from re-entering under the Terrorism Act. Section 44 ballooned the number of arbitrary stops and searches by police of innocent citizens (many of them ethnic minorities, of course). Lord Carlile’s annual review concluded that Section 44 actions “could be cut by at least 50 per cent without significant risk to the public or detriment to policing.” In 2003, peace protestors were prevented from demonstrating under the Act against an arms fair in London.²¹

The post-9/11 Anti-Terrorism Crime and Security Act 2001 sought to allow for extended detention of non-citizens in the country. The Law Lords declared it unlawful, with

Lord Hoffmann telling media: “The real threat to the life of the nation... comes not from terrorism but from laws such as these.”²² The Terrorism Bill sought to extend detention from 14 to 90 days. It was rejected by MPs. The Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 banned political protest within 1km of Parliament.²³ Max Hill QC is the Independent Reviewer of Terrorism Legislation. Following the vehicle rammings in Barcelona in 2017, Hill warned against “thought crime” and said that many counterterrorism laws were “unnecessary.”²⁴

Under General Franco, Spain was a terror state. When the country transitioned to parliamentary representation, degrees of freedom were won. However, terrorist groups including GRAPO (First of October Anti-Fascist Resistance Groups, inactive since 2007) and ETA (Basque Homeland Liberty, now disarmed,) led to antiterrorism measures being included in the Penal Code. Controversially, Article 18.1 potentially criminalises “apology” for terrorism, which could include anything from giving legal advice to terrorists to making satirical observations. As of 2007, “apology” was criminalised only after a judge deemed the offence to constitute “direct incitement.”²⁵

Organic Law No. 7/2000 penalised “glorification of terrorism,” which includes actions “to discredit, demean or humiliate the victims of terrorist offences or their families.” This is important because genuine efforts to determine if a given attack was a false flag by the state or a simulated event that the media believe to be real could be punished as glorifying terrorism.

Even more important than persecuting people who believe in false flags and hoaxes, the Spanish government has suppressed freedom of thought and expression and, ultimately, criticism of government policy. Amnesty International writes of Spain: “An exponential increase in the number of people falling foul of [the] draconian law banning the ‘glorification of terrorism’ or ‘humiliating victims of terrorism’ is part of a sustained attack on freedom of expression.” Under Article 578, the definitions were broadened to the point where charges jumped from three in 2011 to 38 in 2017.²⁶ Terror attacks in one country, like the Hebdo killings in Paris in 2015, have knock-on effects in that Spain, in this case, responded by further broadening the definitions of incitement. Musicians César Strawberry (of Def Con Dos) and Valtonyc (a rapper) were sentenced under Article 578: Strawberry for tweeting a joke about a cake bomb and Valtonyc for insulting the crown, threatening a politician and glorifying violence.²⁷

In addition to attacking freedom, the Spanish government has bol-

The Strange Story of Brenton Tarrant

— BY DR T.J. COLES —

On 15 March 2019, Brenton Tarrant – reportedly the Australian son of a triathlete who died young¹ – murdered 51 unarmed worshippers at two mosques; Al Noor and the Linwood Islamic Centre, in Christchurch, New Zealand. In August 2020, Tarrant was sentenced to life without parole.

But little adds up. Like the Norwegian killer Anders Breivik before him, Tarrant claims to have made a fortune with a cryptocurrency, in this case, the scam BitConnect.² Between 2016 and 2018, he or someone purporting to be him travelled to Argentina, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Croatia, France, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Turkey (several times, after which there was an attempted coup against Prime Minister Erdoğan, whom Tarrant later criticised in his manifesto), the Greek islands of Crete and Santorini (twice), and Ukraine.³ Tarrant's most bizarre and inexplicable visit was to North Korea with an undisclosed “friendship association.” A financially lucky travel-addict or a state asset?

Elements of the neo-Nazi Ukrainian outfit, the National Defense Organisation (Carpathian Sich), reportedly translated Tarrant's white supremacist manifesto, The Great Replacement.⁴

Two days before the massacre, Europe and Asia lost access to Facebook, Instagram, and WhatsApp. But New Zealand appeared to be hit hardest.⁵ Was this a coincidence or pre-emption: to control what people see, share, and download? Tarrant (or purported) sent copies of his manifesto to high-level politicians in New Zealand, including the Prime Minister, as well as to 70 media outlets. Twenty minutes before the massacre, Tarrant (or purported) posted on the online forum 8chan of his plan to livestream the massacre.⁶

It is reported that at approximately 1.40pm local time, Tarrant entered Al Noor Mosque, shooting 42 people dead. Upon leaving, Tarrant allegedly shot another person on the pavement before driving to the Linwood Mosque, at which point the livestream reportedly cut. Tarrant continued the massacre and planned to murder worshippers at the Ashburton Mosque because it has previously been a church. Before he could get there, police rammed his car and arrested him.

As in the Breivik case (and countless other terror attacks before), there just so happened to be a counterterrorism drill taking place in Christchurch at the same time. National radio described it as a “quirky stroke of timing.”⁷

Despite the apparent prima facie evidence of Tarrant’s livestream, he was initially charged with a single murder, allegedly due to police error on the charge sheet. Even more bizarre is the fact that the person he allegedly shot had not at that point died, meaning that Tarrant was initially charged for a single murder which at the time he did not commit. The New Zealand court ordered that the victim not be named.⁸ In light of these events, the New Zealand police stated that they consulted with the Crown Law and Christchurch Crown Solicitors Office before updating the charges against Tarrant.⁹

Social media took unprecedented, coordinated steps of suppressing uploads of the murder video. Within hours, the Global Internet Forum to Counter Terrorism had found 800 different versions of the video.¹⁰ The videos are horribly pixelated for the usually high-quality GoPro. They show piles of corpses before Tarrant had even entered certain areas of the mosque. The movements of the people depicted are impossibly fast.

Was the massacre a real event conducted by special forces, but the video fake and designed to make it look like a single killer? With the exception of the worshipper who allegedly said to Tarrant, “Welcome, brother,” no facial identities, other than Tarrant’s, can be discerned.

One Stephen Millar was arrested outside Papanui High School wearing combat fatigues. The New Zealand Herald reported, rather improbably: “Millar said he had been wearing camouflage clothing since he was a child. He always wore it, although he had quit the habit today – temporarily.”¹¹ Millar also claimed that he told the police that he was unarmed. But the Daily Mail reported: Police “released [Millar] who had taken a gun as protection when he went to pick up his kids from school”¹² (emphasis added).

One of the Noor mosque survivors, Adrian Wright, said that he used his navy training to tackle Tarrant. Wright turns out to be a deck officer who had worked for private maritime security companies.¹³ The presence of a maritime security expert sets the pattern continued in the Bærum Mosque shooting (Norway), allegedly by Philip Manshaus, whose massacre was reportedly prevented by a worshipper, Mohammad Rafiq, who happens to be an ex-Pakistani Air Force serviceman.¹⁴

All very strange. ▲

AFTER THE VIRUS: THE REBIRTH OF A MULTIPOLAR WORLD

“This is a book that I have been waiting to read.”

– Mehmet Sabehehdin, New Dawn contributor

All the signs are here: the modern Western world order dominated by the United States of America will not survive the 21st century. The “End of History” proclaimed after the Cold War has proven to be a dangerous illusion, leaving many unprepared for the crises, conflicts, and seismic shifts already upon us and those still to come. With a dual sense of urgency and calm, Boris Nad’s After the Virus: The Rebirth of a Multipolar World invites readers to catharsis, to recognise that there is not one, but many civilisations, and that the horizons of the future are both open-ended and deeply rooted in different pasts and presents. In this penetrating symphony of essays, Nad challenges us to see that we live in the end of an era, the end of a world, but only one, and that the most turbulent events, figures, and contrasts of our times are episodes in a much older and larger picture of the rise and fall of civilisations and ideas. After the Virus is essential reading for keeping one’s fingers on the pulses of continents and deciphering the dizzying panorama of contemporary geopolitics.

The State as Terrorist

— BY DR T.J. COLES —

Terrorism has largely dropped off the radar. Instead, climate change, the pandemic, war in Ukraine, and the global financial crisis dominate headlines. The kind of terrorism that our self-imposed rulers want us to think is terrorism is when groups attack civilians for ideological, political, or financial purposes. When we hear “terrorist,” we tend to think of al-Qaeda, ISIS, and white supremacists like Brenton Tarrant. But the biggest terrorists are nation-states.

STATES AS TERRORISTS

There is a simple principle: power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely; to quote a clichéd but true statement. Nation-states are the most powerful institutions that have ever existed. They are run by a relatively small elite consisting of financiers, secret agents, militaries, and political frontpeople. They force complicated communities, municipalities, regions, and even countries into monolithic, homogenous systems and brainwash their populations with nationalism. They erect arbitrary and artificial borders to maintain that phony homogeneity. They indoctrinate their populations from the cradle to the grave with schooling and propaganda. Laws and law enforcement are imposed in case the conditioning doesn't fully work.

► Suicide, accident or state murders?

“ THEY INDOCTRINATE THEIR POPULATIONS FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE WITH SCHOOLING AND PROPAGANDA. LAWS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT ARE IMPOSED IN CASE THE CONDITIONING DOESN'T FULLY WORK. ”

The public are terrorised by their local authorities into paying taxes, lest they go to prison: even though the quality of their local services progressively declines, and local debts are often owed by councils to foreign corporations and serviced by the captive taxpayer.¹ Federal authorities terrorise with the threat of imprisonment for not paying national taxes that buy governments weapons to blow children to bits in foreign countries. Private tyrannies that monopolise energy supplies and water threaten to take non-payers to court or even break into homes and seize property (bailiffs) for failing to pay utility bills. These are the actions of gangsters who demand “protection money” from shop owners, or else they come and set fire to the store.

Modern society is little more than the subjugation of the populace by thugs in suits who attend top schools and universities; thugs whose ancestors succeeded in brutalising their opponents into submission so that they could be king, lord, etc. When people try to alert the public as to what is taking place, they are removed or murdered in the name of national security. Their convenient deaths are labelled accident, ill-health, or suicide by the propaganda machine that denigrates as conspiracy theorists those who dare to challenge the conventional narrative. Made to look silly, people internalise the lies and come to hate the truth-tellers, deriding them as fringe lunatics. As Bertrand Russell once wrote in The Impact of Science on Society, successful mind control is convincing the public that snow is black.

SILENCING DISSENTERS

Examples include Gough Whitlam, who in the 1970s was dismissed as Australian PM by the Governor General, supposedly over a House and Senate gridlock. The more realistic reason was that Whitlam was threatening not to renew the license for Pine Gap, the American spy base that listens in on communications across Asia.²

The state also murders dissenters. In 2003, a British Ministry of Defence contractor, Dr David Kelly, was accused of being the sole source for a BBC journalist, who said that the source confirmed that the Tony Blair government knew that Iraq had no weapons of mass destruction – the lie on which the invasion was predicated. The more likely scenario is that a very high-level member of government inside Blair’s cabinet had been speaking to the media and that Kelly was blackmailed into being a “fall-guy” so that the government member could enjoy protection.³ (Kelly had likely been having an affair with an American spy.) To protect the source, or shut Kelly up, or send a warning to other would-be whistleblowers, Kelly was murdered and his death ruled suicide.

In the US, a young hot-shot journalist who drove around in a Mercedes, Michael Hastings, had hit upon a major story for Rolling Stone about US military and intelligence activities in Afghanistan. Hastings emailed friends saying that he had uncovered something big and needed “to go off the radar for a bit.”⁴ His car was seen speeding down a residential street very early one morning in 2013 before hitting a tree and bursting into flames, as luxury cars tend to do on impact. Not. Rumours abound that Hastings had uncovered top-level links to heroin smuggling or child trafficking, but we’ll never know. WikiLeaks later released information that the CIA has the capacity to remotely hack the computer chips in cars,⁵ leading many to suspect that Hastings was murdered using this method.

'The use of violence and intimidation in the pursuit of political aims.'

PUBLIC AS GUINEA PIGS

There’s also a long history of governments testing biological and chemical weapons on the public. In the 1950s and early ‘60s, the British used South Australia’s Maralinga to conduct nuclear tests. The environmental reports claimed that the ar-areas were terra nullius, no one's land, and that the only inhabitants were rabbits. But different Aboriginal communities lived there. Some, like Yami Lester, went blind as a result of the tests.⁶

In more recent years, the evidence has tipped in favour of SARS-CoV-2 being a human-engineered virus by EcoHealth Alliance scientists working under US government grants at a lab in Wuhan, China.⁷ Having killed millions of people with a likely-human-made virus, governments of the world used violence to enforce draconian lockdowns instead of dealing with the pandemic in a logical and humane way.⁸

In many countries, governments terrorised their populations with the threat of joblessness, which means homelessness and inability to buy food and pay bills. They demanded that their publics take an experimental "vaccine," which has been linked by federal reporting systems to excess mortality and does not work like a normal vaccine: it doesn't prevent transmission or infection; i.e., it's not a vaccine.

KILLING FOREIGNERS

But we should always spare more than a thought for the poor people abroad. The terrorisation of domestic populations is small compared to the "shock and awe" bombing of states' foreign policies.

With US-British weapons and organisation, the Saudi elites have murdered tens of thousands of Yem-enis and tortured millions of babies, toddlers, and children, as well as their desperate mothers, by starving them; many to death.⁹ Having created the Taliban indirectly in the 1980s and then empowering them briefly in the '90s,¹⁰ the US withdrew from Afghanistan after 20 years of occupation in such a way that has enabled the regime to return back to where it left off.

In Iraq, the US and Britain shell-shocked the entire nation and surreptitiously fomented a civil war¹¹ to blame Iraqis, not themselves, for the massive death toll. When monsters in the form of ISIS emerged from this monstrous situation, the US and Britain bombed Iraq again, killing tens of thousands more people.

Never lose sight of the fact that the nation-state, regardless of who controls it, is the biggest terrorist of all. ▲ of Traditionalism, we are now living in an age of increasing strife and chaos: the Kali Yuga of the Hindus or the Germanic Ragnarok. Evola argues that the crises that dominate the daily lives of our societies are part of a secret occult war to remove the support of spiritual and traditional values in order to turn man into a passive instrument of the powerful.
